$25 Billion U.S. Economy Boost Set

Washington Post

PLAINS, Ga. — Jimmy Carter and the Democratic leadership of Congress agreed Friday to support a $25 billion to $30 billion two-year economic stimulus program that would include up to $11 billion in tax rebates on individual U.S. 1976 federal income taxes.

The stimulus package that Carter will propose to Congress would also involve over the 1977 and 1978 fiscal years: $7 billion to $10 billion in new government spending for jobs and public works programs, permanent tax cuts for low and middle income taxpayers who do not itemize their deductions and a relatively small permanent cut in business taxes.,

It is expected to create 800,000 new jobs by the end of 1978.

The congressional leadership, headed by House Speaker Thomas (Tip) O'Neill of Massachusetts and Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd of West Virginia, enthusiastically supported the proposals after a four-hour meeting with Carter and his top economic advisers here.

O'Neill said he was "tremendously pleased" with the proposals, which he said Carter had agreed to modify somewhat after hearing suggestions from the leadership. Byrd called it "a great package." Both predicted passage of the proposals by Congress but conceded that some changes in them are likely.

After the meeting, Carter outlined the complicated package to reporters but left many of his listeners confused with a series of what appeared to be contradictory figures. It was left to Charles Schultze, Carter's choice to head the Council of Economic Advisers, to explain the details of the package later.

According to Schultze, the Carter economic stimulus package will have four components:

—A program of direct government expenditures to create jobs that would amount to $2 billion in the current fiscal year which ends Sept. 30, and $5 billion to $8 billion in fiscal year 1978.

—A change in the standard income tax deduction, used by an estimated 69 per cent of American taxpayers, that in effect would increase the size of deductions that could be claimed by low and middle income taxpayers. This would be done by eliminating the current range in the standard deduction — now $1700 to $2400 for single taxpayers and $2100 to $2800 for couples depending on their incomes — and allowing a flat standard deduction of $2400 for all single taxpayers and $2800 for all couples.

—A cut in business taxes that would amount to $1 billion in the 1977 fiscal year and $2 billion in subsequent fiscal years. This is likely to involve

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver hasn't lost quite as many people as census officials first reported. The preliminary count for the city now stands at 407,226, a drop of about 20,000 since 1971 but about 10,000 more than census officials first estimated last year.

Eight Quakes Rattle Frisco Area

Times News Services

SAN FRANCISCO — A swarm of eight earthquakes rocked a large portion of northern California during the night, but there were no reports of injuries and minimal ones of damage.

A spoksman at the University of California seismographic station at Berkeley said that the first one was recorded at 10:35 p.m. PST Friday night and the last and most severe struck at 1:38 a.m. PST today.

He placed the magnitude of the last temblor at 5.0 and said that one about 40 minutes earlier registered 4.0. Most area residents reported feeling only the two earthquakes.

"The epicenter is about midway between Berkeley and Walnut Creek about 10 miles east of Berkeley," he said, pinpointing an area about 20 miles east of San Francisco. "That would be in between the Hayward Fault and Calaveras Fault," the spokesman continued.

Asked if he thought more quakes might be on the way, he said "I think so, but they will probably be smaller."

Jittery Bay area residents bombarded police with calls and a San Francisco officer reported that one street showed minor cracking and a chandelier fell down in a Mission district home.

A San Francisco resident said of the 4.0 quake, "it lasted about 15 seconds and my room was really rocking. I thought my wife's picture on my desk would fall over, it was bouncing around so."

In Tehran, meanwhile, Persian-language newspapers reported a severe earthquake hit the village of Dahzir in Iran's southwestern province of Fars today.

The reports could not be immediately confirmed by the earthquake reporting service in Tehran, nor were any additional reports available elsewhere.

The site of the reported quake is just a few miles north of the Persian Guf. The area is heavily faulted and there have been several devastating quakes there in the past.

An earthquake hit Bandar Abbas on the Persian Gulf Wednesday, injuring 10 persons and causing considerable structural damage.

Five persons in the area died when their home collapsed around them the following day, possibly because it was weakened by the quake and rain floods that have afflicted the area and upset communications for the past week or so.

Another quake was reported by radio and television broadcasts on Thursday as having occurred also in the Bandar Abbas vicinity.

And Managua the capital of Nicaragua — scene of a devastating earthquake in 1972 — was jolted Friday night by a five-second tremor, but there were no immediate reports of death or damage.

The tremor hit at 9:26 p.m. (7:26 p.m. PST). Local seismographic institute officials said it was caused by a strong movement on the Pacific coast. Its intensity was not immediately known.

Guaranteed Income Eyed for IWA Pact

VANCOUVER (CP) — A guaranteed annual income plan may be included in contract demands by the International Woodworkers of America this year, Jack Munro, IWA regional president for B.C., said Friday.

Loggers, who make up about one quarter of the IWA's 40,000 membership in British Columbia, experienced an exceptionally good year in 1976 with few closures of the woods due to summer forest fires or snow.

Munro said that in 1975, however, loggers got only six or seven months steady work.

"If the guys work like they did in 1976 the plan wouldn't cost the employers any money," he said. "The plan would be for years like 1975."

It is believed that any plan proposed by the IWA would try to guarantee the workers a full year's income at regular straight time rates. Rates now range between $7.16 an hour for common labor and $9.47 an hour for top trades.

Better Sales In Forestry?

DUNCAN (CP) — There is room for optimism in the 1977 outlook for forest products markets, Don Lanskail, president of the Council of Forest Industries, said Friday.

However, he told the Western Independent Log Haulers' Association here that "unless we can effect some basic changes in our cost structure, any gain we receive will be short-lived."

Lanskail said lumber sales led the market improvement last year and pulp and paper markets appeared good until mid-year when softening demand led to overstocking of world inventory. Plywood faced severe competition at home and finished weaker in overseas markets.

The improvements were a result of some of the world's economies beginning to come out of the 1975 recession.

"If this recovery continues in 1977, outlook for timber is good but there is no firm indication of rapid recovery of markets for other products."

Lanskail said lumber improvements in 1976 should be considered against the depressed market in 1975, when production fell 19 per cent from the 1974 level to 7.5 billion board feet. Final 1976 figures were unavailable but a good estimate would be 10.2 billion board feet.

He said the United States economy continued its gradual improvement in 1976 but housing starts, a key factor for the B.C. forest industry, did not reach expected levels. An improvement to 1.7 million starts from 1.5 million starts is forecast for the U.S. in 1977.

Lanskail said the U.S. recovery might also mean less U.S. plywood will be available for export to Canada and Europe this year which should benefit Canadian producers.

"Continuing competition from the U.S. is an astonishing example of how Canadian costs are allowing American plywood producers to jump a 15-per-cent tariff barrier and grab over 22 per cent of the Canadian domestic market," said Lanskail. "What is even more astonishing is that just five years ago the Americans held less than one per cent of the Canadian plywood market."

Lanskail said that with continued promotion of platform frame construction in Japan, it is expected 75 million board feet will be sold there this year.

Expansion of the market in Japan might enable Canadian firms to diminish their economic dependence on the American market, he said.

Lanskail forecast soft pulp and paper markets would continue until at least mid-year.

He said the high costs in the Canadian forest industry have created a price situation "which is allowing our lower-cost competitors to build manufacturing facilities and enter the market."

A TOUCH OF GLASS

MONTREAL (CP) — Pepsi Cola Canada Ltd. was fined $3,000 in sessions court Friday for three counts of selling soft drinks containing dangerous materials, including glass, sand, and in one case, a full book of matches.

The charges, under the Food and Drug Act, were laid after inspectors discovered last January and February that three bottles out of a batch of 2,000 contained foreign particles.

Federal Crown Prosecutor Michel Lecours said the presence of foreign particles in the bottles of Pepsi-Cola and Teem constituted a danger for the public.

Icy Roads Play Havoc

Icy road conditions played havoc with motorists overnight with area police reporting 22 accidents.

There were nine mishaps in Saanich, seven in Victoria, two each in Esquimalt and Colwood, and one each in Oak Bay and Sidney.

Police said that although damages ran into several thousand dollars there were no reports of serious injuries.

Victoria police said power was knocked out for a short time in the 200 block Gorge after a car driven by James Peck of 640 Broadmead struck a Hydro pole at 12:59 a.m.

Peck cut his arm and injured his back, and was taken to Victoria General Hospital where he was treated and released.

Only Million Shots Bad Swine Flu Lab Replies

TORONTO (CP) — A spokesman for Connaught Laboratories Ltd. says a published report quoting a federal official as saying that more than three million doses of swine-flu vaccine have been found to be unusable is grossly inaccurate.

Connaught consultant John Kieran said in an interview Friday that slightly more than one million doses of vaccine packaged by the laboratory have been found to have what he described as a cosmetic problem.

The doses were beginning to show minute particulate matter that did not meet test requirements, "but their potency and safety were not affected."

He added that the problem, discovered within the last two to three weeks, could be solved by filtering the vaccine and repackaging it.

The published report quoted an unnamed federal source as saying that 3.4 million doses of the 10.1 million doses ordered by the federal government "were deemed to be unsatisfactory" by federal health officials who inspect vaccine before it is approved for use.

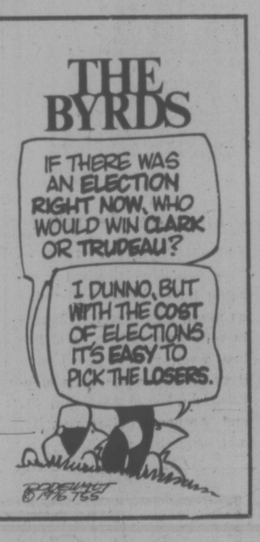
The report said the federal government has committed at least $13.8 million in contracts with Connaught Laboratories and the Armand Frappier Institute in Montreal to process the vaccine.

Meet Some Interesting Canadians . . .

The Times wishes to introduce its readers to some very interesting Canadians, The Byrds, brain-children of Calgary cartoonist Art Rodewalt, who will be appearing daily on the front page beginning Monday.

The Byrds deliver pungent, witty comment on Canadian politics, education, economics and morals, and also wander farther afield from time to time to look at world affairs.

Rodewalt's characters will give you a chuckle a day — even if the chuckle is at your expense as in today's introduction.



YOU'VE A PROBLEM?

Here we are, well into the new year, and you still haven't shed those pounds which appeared with gorging over the Christmas holiday.

Life's hard, isn't it?

But you've got a problem tens of thousands of people halfway round the world would love to have. Old people with sunken faces, kids with stick-like legs, people who are hungry all the time.

They need food, they need education, they need jobs. The Unitarian Service Committee of Canada exists just to help these sorts of people — in places like Nepal, Lesotho, Bangladesh — help themselves.

Most of the money Canadians give to the USC goes to helping children, just like your children except they suffer from malnutrition, a chance at much of a future.

Residents in the Capital district have just about matched the $23,000 they gave last year to the USC campaign. Donations in the current campaign have topped $22,000 and are still trickling in.

With just a little push — a final stirring of belated Christmas spirit — they could lift this fund to the hoped-for $30,000.

Just $1 for every pound each of us added would do it easily.

But it will have to be soon because the Victoria Times, which sponsors the local campaign each winter, is about to close the drive for another year.

Donations can be mailed to Victoria Times, PO Box 300, Victoria, or dropped in at the Times office, 2621 Douglas St.

WHOLESALE PRICE OF COFFEE HIKED

The wholesale price of coffee will be shooting up another 40 cents a pound next week, a spokesman for Nabob Foods announced today.

In a press release the company said that after Jan. 14 the wholesale price will be $3.14.

The retail price is expected to be anywhere from $3.44 to $3.74 a pound, the highest ever.

The company notes that since July, 1975, the average cost of green coffee has soared from about 60 cents a pound to $2.24. The prices are New York prices and do not take into account any manufacturing costs, including a 15 per cent shrinkage that occurs at roasting.

The company expects world production will be 11 million bags or 15 per cent short of world demand this year.

'Children Are People Too . . .'

The B.C. Association of Social Workers Friday urged the provincial government to establish a bill of rights for children.

A summary of a brief to be sent to Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm says that current law sees children as chattels.

"It does not recognize them as persons with needs, feelings and opinions," the brief says.

The brief urges seven major reforms to family laws for this legislative session and says the reforms are essential to bring child welfare legislation and family court practice up to what the association feels is a minimum standard.

"Children now have almost no legal rights and our family courts are driving a wedge into troubled families, despite the best efforts of judges and existing court personnel," the chairman of the association's family law committee, Jocelyn Gifford, said.

The brief also urges:

—That the unified family court project now operating in Surrey and Richmond be expanded to the rest of the province;

—That the law provide alternatives to taking children away from their families;

—That the law define "emotional neglect" of children, as well as physical neglect;

—That limits be placed on court adjournments and the amount of time children can be held away from their families;

—That hospitals and schools be required by law to report cases of child abuse.

Land for Trinkets?

VANCOUVER (CP) — The colonial governments of Vancouver Island and British Columbia could have settled Indian land claims for a few trinkets but didn't think they could afford it, according to lawyer Don Rosenbloom.

Rosenbloom, who has represented the Nishga Tribal Council in its land claims, told a public meeting the total claim could probably have been settled for less than today's cost of taking tribe members to dinner at a downtown hotel.

He said the Nishgas have not wavered in the 107-year history of their claim for 5,750 square miles in the Nass River watershed north of Prince Rupert.

"This has been their land since time immemorial and many tribal wars were fought over the boundaries long before the British colonized B.C. Indians have a respect for tribal boundaries even if they are not registered in the provincial land registry."

The federal and provincial governments now are negotiating the land claims but "during the 1840s and 1850s the British colonial office time and again insisted that the colonial government get out and settle these claims," Rosenbloom said.

He said Governor James Douglas "did sign a few small treaties but left virtually all B.C. untreatied."

"After B.C. entered confederation, this became a federal matter and Ottawa had no interest in it as all treaties had been made by the British government"

TILDEN DROPS SUIT FOR SPACE

OTTAWA (CP) — Tilden Rent-a-Car has dropped its $10 million damage suit against the government in exchange for a compromise agreement on booth space for the Canadian-owned company at major airports across the country.

While Tilden and Host Rent-a-Car, another Canadian firm, announced acceptance Friday of government terms for renting counter space at the nine major Canadian airports, other car rental companies were refusing comment.

The car rental companies had been called in by transport department officials to look at contract terms and announce within 30 days whether they would sign agreements.

Avis, Hertz, Budget, Tilden and Host bids had been accepted by the transport department but Tilden disputed the department's selection method. Holiday, another Canadian company, also has announced plans for legal action against the government. It has been excluded entirely from the major airports in the recent round of contract bidding.

The Tilden brothers, sole owners of Tilden Rent-a-Car, said they were disappointed that their company did not get third choice of counter space as they felt it was entitled to under the bids received by the transport department.

But they said they decided to accept fourth position because it was an improvement over the original department offer of fifth position. And legal proceedings would have been long and expensive and perhaps fruitless.

Edward Posen of Winnipeg, Host President, said he found the Tilden law suit "hard to believe except as a publicity stunt."

While Posen said he was satisfied with the counter space his company has received, he indicated he might object if he felt his company would be undercut by booth arrangements reached with other firms. He had not yet seen what the settlement were with other companies.

Fraud Of $10M Charged

VANCOUVER (CP) — Robert Lynn Dolan, a Calgary investment counsellor and manager of mutual funds, was charged Friday with 24 counts involving charges of theft, fraud and conspiracy in the improper use of about $10 million in mutual funds.

The charges — 18 of theft, five of fraud and one of conspiracy — resulted from transactions involving seven mutual funds and are the same charges laid last month against former Bank of B.C. president Frank D. Trebell of Vancouver.

Trebell was charged Dec. 22 with 30 counts and is to appear in provincial court on Jan. 11.

Dolan is believed to be living in Costa Rica and, besides the charges laid against him here, he faces about 20 similar charges in Alberta.

Canada does not have an extradition treaty with Costa Rica.

The charges against Dolan arise from the same transactions that brought the charges against Trebell. Dolan will not face as many charges in British Columbia because he has also been charged in Alberta.

The transactions occurred in B.C. and Alberta between March, 1973, and June, 1975, and five of the funds involved were in the custody of Yorkshire Trust Co.

The charges follow about 15 months of investigation by the superintendent of broker's office and the RCMP.

Dolan is originally from Saskatchewan and his first work in the investment community was with the Regina-based company Houston, Willoughby and Co. Ltd.

After leaving the firm in 1963, he taught for two years at the Saskatchewan Technical Institute, where he developed a special course on investments.

Between 1966 and 1968 he worked for Home Oil in Calgary.

In 1968 he set up his own investment counselling firm — Dolan Investments Ltd. — which later became Dias Ltd. Dias is named in five of the charges against both Trebell and Dolan.

Dolan left Alberta in the summer of 1975, lived for a time on the Hawaiian island of Maui, and is believed to have moved to Costa Rica about nine months ago.

Dolan, alonb with Trebell, is alleged to have taken money from the various mutual funds and invested and reinvested it for private gain, with profits trimmed off and the money returned to the funds.

Dolan and Trebell once were the managers for several of the mutual funds involved in the charges, but management of the funds has been reorganized and the two are no longer involved.

At the time the charges were laid against Trebell, senior executives administering the funds assured the investing public that the funds were secure and there was no need for concern over the charges.

Missing Tanker Crew May Still Be Alive

BOSTON (AP) — The U.S. Coast Guard says there is still a good chance that some of the Grand Zenith's crew members are alive, although a five-day search for the missing oil tanker has turned up only two life jackets, a trunk and a mattress.

The Panamanian ship is presumed sunk, but a coast guard spokesman said there is "a great possibility" that the 38 Taiwanese crewmen have survived and are possibly in the life rafts.",

The coast guard says a person not wearing protective clothing would almost certainly die after 2½ hours in the seven-degree Celsius ocean water.

But if the crew members were in life rafts with canopy covering and if they managed correct rationing, they might survive, said PO William Van Valkenburg.

The life jackets, marked with the ship's name, were found about 330 miles east-southeast of Cape Cod and 240 miles south of Halifax. Later in the day, the trunk and a mattress were seen floating about 14 miles away.

The Grand Zenith was last heard from Dec. 30 when its position was given as 60 miles south of Yarmouth, N.S.

Meanwhile, on the west coast, the coast guard has recommended studying the possibility of pilots boarding ships at the western end of the Strait of Juan de Fuca rather than waiting until ships get as far as Port Angeles.

The recommendation was made during a meeting with the state pilotage commission Thursday.

The coast guard asked the commission to study extension of pilotage and said it might complement radar surveillance and mandatory traffic lanes now planned for the Strait. Ships currently proceed as far as Port Angeles without state pilots.

Rear Admiral Chester Richmond, commander of the 13th Coast Guard District, told the commission it should give attention to assigning more experienced pilots to larger ships.

Captain Phil Luther of the commission said he didn't know that the captain of the port has the right to give navigation orders to a ship.

"Our authority is complete and all-inclusive under ... the Ports and Waterway Act of 1973. We don't intend to tell you to turn left or right 30 degrees, though we do have that authority. We will continue to tell you when to leave the dock or remain there, when to reduce speed in fog, if necessary, and give other orders," Admiral Richmond said.

allowing businesses to claim about 5 per cent of what they pay in social security payroll taxes as a credit against their income taxes. This proposed change, like the change in the standard deduction, would be permanent and would remain in effect beyond fiscal year 1978.

—A one-time-only rebate on individual 1976 income taxes of between $7 billion and $11 billion, with the benefits aimed primarily at low and middle income taxpayers. As part of the rebate program, Social Security recipients who do not pay income taxes will receive payments in lieu of a tax rebate.

Firemen Arrested

SHAMOKIN, Pa. (UPI) — Two volunteer firemen were being held without bail today on arson and murder charges in connection with a hotel fire last week that claimed nine lives. The suspects were identified as David Dietman, 21, and Anthony Primerano, 19, both of Shamokin.

Firefighters To Meet Monday

Victoria firefighters will meet again Monday with Labor Minister Allan Williams and until then the dispute remains at a standstil.

Union president Ross Cameron said after a Friday meeting with Williams that he doesn't know what the minister has in mind for Monday, but as a "common courtesy" no action will be taken over the weekend.

The 13-month long dispute between the firefighters and the city of Victoria moved a step closer to strike action when the union Thursday asked mediator Clark Gilmour to withdraw from the talks.

Cameron said Williams appeared interested in the firefighters' problems and "I feel better just to get these things off my chest."

He said it was the first time he had met Williams and said he was impressed.

WAR ON SMITH URGED

MAPUTO, Mozambique (WP) — Rhodesian nationalist leader Robert Mugabe reaffirmed his belief here friday that only an intensified guerrilla war against Rhodesia would force the Salisbury government to negotiate meaningfully for a majority African government in the country. (See also Page 31.)

Mugabe, who is joint leader with Joshau Nkomo of the Patriotic Front nationalist alliance, said experience showed that Rhodesian Premier Ian Smith would respond only to military or economic pressures and not to diplomatic neogitation.

In an interview, Mugabe remarked: "What we would like to see is a new psychological state of mind among the white settlers of Zimbabwe (Rhodesia), and in Mr. Smith himself, which would iinduce him to negotiate much more readily than he is prepared to do at the moment. Mr. Smith has not been sufficiently beaten yet, therefore the only alternative that exists at the moment is an intensification of the armed struggle."

In essence, the 52-year-old nationalist leader indicated that if Smith would peacefully surrender to African rule "well and good" but if not war was the only way.

Defected Soviet Emigre Charged as Spy by FBI

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — A Soviet emigre who told acquaintances he defected five years ago has been charged with passing United States space shuttle system secrets to a Soviet diplomat.

Ivan Rogalsky, a 34-year-old unemployed mechanic, was arrested Friday night in rural Lakewood Township with classified data in his possession, Louis Giovanetti, FBI agent in charge in New Jersey, told a news conference.

Rogalsky was to be arraigned today before U.S. Magistrate William Hunt on charges of espionage.

Giovanetti said Rogalsky had been under surveillence and had passed information to Yevgeniy Karpov, second secretary of the Soviet mission to the United Nations.

Karpov has long been suspected of being a Soviet intelligence agent, Giovanetti said. He has diplomatic immunity and cannot be arrested by authorities, but he has been named as an unindicted co-conspirator and will be told to leave the country, the FBI agent said.

Giovanetti said some information was passed to Karpov, but nothing vital to U.S. national security reached the Soviet Union.

Rogalsky was accused of befriending an engineer at the RCA Corp. research centre in Princeton and asking the employee to provide data on the space shuttle system and other classified projects.

The FBI in Washington said Rogalsky had in his possession at the time of his arrest some highly classified documents from the RCA facility.

The engineer, who was not identified, informed the FBI and acted as an undercover agent, the FBI said.

The FBI described Rogalsky as a registered alien living in Jackson Township, a town with a large community of emigres from Eastern Europe.

Herman Schulze, who owns a restaurant in the town, said Rogalsky told him he defected from the Soviet Union when his ship docked in a German port in 1971.

He said Rogalsky seemed to be well liked in the community.

KILLER BEES HIT ARGENTINE

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — The buzzing has become a roar in northern Argentina, where killer bees have been swooping down without warning in recent days.

The bees have struck four times in the last two weeks and their victims have included both man and beast.

Firemen were called Friday to drive away the bees with poison after a swarm descended on mourners at a funeral in the farming town of Cachi, in the tropical north 1,300 miles from Buenos Aires. Reports said several persons were treated for multiple stings.

On Thursday, a cloud of bees engulfed a man walking along a highway in northern Tucuman province. He died in hospital, the first fatality since a six-year-old boy was stung to death last October.

The bees buzzed into a farm near La Banda, a town 750 miles north of the capital on Dec. 29, injuring a man and killing his horse. Two pigs, a dog, and more than 100 chickens were killed by another swarm in Santa Fe province Nov. 5.

Bee experts say the killer bees were discovered in Argentina in 1967. They say the bees came from Brazil, where they were introduced in 1956 by an American scientist who wanted to breed an African strain with gentler, look-alike varieties common to South America.

Palestinian Troops To Leave Lebanon

BEIRUT (UPI)—The Arab League has ordered 4,000 Palestinian regular soldiers to leave Lebanon within four days and told warring factions to surrender their heavy guns or lose them by force.

A four-country Arab truce committee met with President Elias Sarkis Friday and set Wednesday, January 12, as a deadline for leftist, rightist and Palestinian groups to turn in their artillery, tanks and armoured cars.

A presidential communique said, "the committee authorized the Arab deterrent forces to supervise the implementation of this decision and, if necessary, to raid places to seize all heavy weapons after the deadline."

The truce committee, including representatives from Syria, Egypt, Saudi Arabia and Kuwait, has worked for weeks to prepare both sides for the arms confiscation program. Almost all the troops in the Arab League force are from Syria.

Soviet Plea

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Two prominent Soviet dissenters issued an implicit appeal today to leaders of Western Communist and Socialist parties to defend members of a human rights group whose apartments were searched by security police this week.

Historian Roy Medvedev and mathematician Valentin Turchin also alleged that authorities had planted foreign currency in homes they searched and issued "slanderous" charges against group members through the official Tass news agency.

A SUMMARY OF YOUR INSURANCE POLICY

...in plain language

You will soon be receiving the new ICBC plain language insurance guide—"All About Autoplan." As this is not a legal document it cannot replace the Automobile Insurance Act and Regulations and is not a substitute for them.

It sets out in plain language what Autoplan Insurance is all about and what it can do for you. Every motorist in B.C. will receive a copy of "All About Autoplan" with his renewal form. Please read it carefully and keep it in the glove compartment of your car for reference purposes.

THINGS TO LOOK FOR

Rate Class codes are important. In the Renewal Brochure which tells you how to renew your Autoplan Insurance and Motor Vehicle licence and in the "All About Autoplan" guide, you will find a Rate Class chart. Compare the present use of your vehicle and the age, sex and marital status of the drivers with the Rate Class Chart.

Locate your correct Rate Class number on the chart and compare it with the number in the box on your Renewal Form. If there is a change in your Rate Class or if there are three asterisks () on your form you should consult an Autoplan agent or Motor Vehicle Branch office. ACCIDENT INFORMATION FORM

The last page of the new Autoplan Guide is an Accident Information form. If you keep the Guide in your glove compartment you will have the Accident Information form handy in case of an accident. Just fill in the details and hand the form to the ICBC adjuster when you take your vehicle to an ICBC claims facility.

FINANCE PLAN

An ICBC finance plan is available for your convenience. If you use the plan, you must still make full payment for your licence plate fees and a 25% down-payment on your Autoplan Insurance premium; the balance will require three instalment payments at two-month intervals. The Nuclear Joust Again

When British Columbia Hydro chairmen start talking about nuclear power generation environmentalists run for the wailing wall. Following in the footsteps of Gordon Shrum, Robert Bonner claims B.C. will have to consider a nuclear power program within 10 years. That is enough to send off the rockets. Traditionally in this province, politicians have shied away from nuclear energy while Hydro spokesmen have championed its cause. Since the politicians have maintained a slight edge on the power of Hydro to make unilateral decisions, fission power has remained in a theoretical purgatory.

But rising costs, environmental concerns and distance from major power consumers make hydroelectric projects increasingly untenable. Using all our river systems, according to Bonner, would provide another 50 years of potential water-generated electricity. Subtracting the Fraser's potential — damming this waterway would be tantamount to killing the salmon fishing industry — leaves the province with a mere 20 year potential. So it would appear Hydro is gearing for another joust over its perennial dream with a new set of politicians.

While the study of nuclear alternatives is advisable at this time, given increasing demand, there is no need to rush into this controversial technology. Nuclear power generating plants haven't been an unqualified success. A New Jersey utility has just started a $100 million fund to cover costs of entombing one of its obsolete nuclear plants (they have an estimated 40-year life span — 60 to 70 years, says Bonner. That is about one-tenth of the original capital cost. Besides this latent cost radiation hazards are known to last for hundreds of years. Is this nuclear garbage going to be our testament to future generations? If current nuclear technology for power generation is doubtful that doesn't preclude keeping an eye on developments. But looking over the record of nuclear power plants around the world indicates that they would be difficult pills to sell the public. And a government that tried to foist a nuclear power plant on environment-conscious British Columbians might find itself entombed at the next election.

Besides these practical arguments, Hydro predicates its nuclear arguments on a predicted annual electricity demand of 8½ per cent. Has there been no thought to conservation of this expensive utility or do we just plod along saying more, more, more? As another former Hydro chairman, Dr. Hugh Keenleyside, notes, Sweden and Switzerland use about one-half and one-third respectively the electricity that Canadians consume on a per capita basis. A responsible crown corporation such as Hydro should be directed to study conservation programs as well as potential dam sites. To date most of the corporation's imagination has been consumed in spending money.

Bonner relegates wind, solar and tidal power to the indeterminate future. In terms of government enthusiasm for these alternatives he is correct. The Canadian government budgeted less than $1 million for solar energy research last year. Yet we read that Hydro will have a cash and borrowing requirement of $5.3 billion within five years. Since it is a popular conception, especially among hard-nosed businessmen of Bonner's ilk, that government should do less, why doesn't B.C. Hydro join with other utility companies and start a sinking fund to sponsor research into alternative energy sources? A measure of success would bring in patent revenue that might last for years.

The Hydro chairman says solar, wind and tidal power are all energy resources that would be used increasingly in the future. But they were not practical yet for use in B.C. The same goes for nuclear power generation.

The Empty Partnership's Laissez-Faire Ignorance

Despite the fact that "the balance between government spending and revenue grew severely distorted under the previous government," British Columbia's economic outlook is not much better after one year of Social Credit stewardship.

At least that is the impression in the wake of the B.C. Employers Council annual economic forecast. Last year business in general blamed David Barrett's NDP regime for most economic ills that befell the province. This year . . . well, uhh, it's a combination of national and international factors, in the opinion of most businessmen.

To be fair, the council's annual forecast rarely explicitly condemns the incumbent government's economic policies. In 1973 it correctly criticized inflationary NDP wage settlements in the public sector. For its 1975 outlook it dryly noted that capital spending would not increase substantially, except by utility and government sectors.

But in 1977 even criticism of the Bennett administration's taxation policies (they eroded consumer spending and confidence) were prefaced with the statement that "the psychological impact of the B.C. Social Credit government continues to be very definitely a positive economic factor."

Since nothing raises corporate blood pressure more than the spectre of what it perceives as "socialism," the above statement is probably true, even though such a mind set must be predicted on blind faith given the current regime's track record.

Reading further: "Profitability in the metal mining industry continues to be at low levels with an estimated return on investment of below three per cent for both 1975 and 1976." Revised provincial tax measures have reduced mining costs but they have not been sufficient to return the industry to a healthy condition. That would indicate international demand as opposed to NDP royalties were the chief culprit in the industry's decline.

Funny, isn't it, you don't see any of those lawyers dressed in miner's clothes parading on the lawns of the legislature this year, despite the industry's malaise.

Coal development is the only major economic initiative undertaken by the Bennett administration and the report notes: "Japan's demand for B.C. coal has declined and the over-all export volume was 19 per cent less in the first nine months of 1976 than in the same period of 1975."

While the report sees "steady improvement in lumber sales" and a reasonably good year in the fishing industry it is not bullish on the B.C. economy.

None of this is meant to be critical of what is probably realistic speculation about the B.C. economy, but it does show a mental attitude on the part of provincial business, a confidence in the current government despite its mistakes.

Perhaps this is best exemplified in a remark by council president Bill Hamilton that the business community is not concerned so much with what the government is doing as it is about the speed and harshness of its first actions.

It is not concerned much about what the government is doing. In other words, the Bennett administration's laissez-faire attitudes are acceptable, but their implementation is a trifle rough.

Even with its mild caveat, business and government appear to agree that the end justifies the means. This is a dangerous attitude on the part of business.

In the old days of W. A. C. Bennett's cowboy capitalism, government built highways and dams while big business made money. Life was simple and the good times rolled. But this isolated parallel existence, in which government and business knew their place, resulted in a paucity of social legislation that left B.C. in the dust of the other two wealthier provinces.

Our educational system is a shambles. Health care standards don't compare with those of Alberta or Ontario. Legal aid funds have been reduced to the point where a person can be jailed in this province without an advocate. Mincome has been distorted and downgraded.

And with all this, we appear to be drifting back to the regressive days of laissez-faire ignorance. Government will do as little as possible, while the giants sell out the company province.

Where are the bright young people from the business and professional communities interested in a few years of government service? Ironically, it was the NDP who brought in the Bill Neilsons, James Matkins, David Vickers and Paul Weilers. Now we are back to the political hacks and favored friends.

Many of the recent appointments to crown corporations and government positions have been mediocre, uninventive, with no thought of striking an imaginative balance.

One would think a pro-business government would attract the best brains from the corporate sector, at least for an apprenticeship, as so often happens in the federal jurisdiction. Since there are so few such appointments under this regime we can only conclude that either the government doesn't want them or it is not interested now that things are back to normal.

Business and government go their mutually exclusive ways in B.C. again, meeting occasionally to reaffirm an empty partnership. It is something the province's businessmen should reflect on, because it was this indifference to people that produced an NDP government. And it could happen again, just as sure as we'll have a balanced budget this year. — G.R.O.

UK Press May Go Under

LONDON — A wave of Fleet Street printing union strikes during the festive season has underlined how close Britain's national newspaper industry may be to a radical shakeout.

The possibility of closure faces several national newspapers. Part of the blame would lie with printing workers, unless a major change of attitude occurred soon.

More than 30 million copies were lost by national newspapers in a series of Christmas and New Year strikes by printing workers supporting a maze of demands for special payments for holiday work. The workers were already being given time off and extra pay and the government had ruled that any further payments would breach the national wage restraint policy.

Newspaper managements, therefore, suffered financial losses for trying to live up to a policy to which all British unions have sworn allegiance.

But this Alice in Wonderland episode is of relatively minor importance beside a larger question that could decide whether some of these workers have any employers to strike against in the near future.

These workers must soon decide whether to support a plan that could guarantee the long-term future of the newspaper industry by allowing the entry of modern printing technology. On present form, they will reject the plan and some national newspapers will eventually collapse.

Modern Methods

In rejecting the plan, the workers would be defying the collective wisdom of their own national leadership which has, after a long siege at last come to believe that the industry's peril transcends all other considerations.

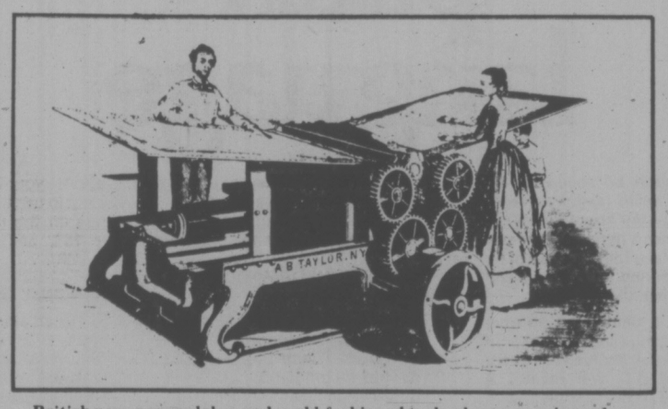
The union leaders have felt able to support a plan for redundancy payments, income support, larger pensions and retraining grants for an estimated 7,000 workers who would lose their jobs because they believe the alternative is loss of more jobs due to extensive closures.

The background against which the union leaders decided this is the closure since 1945 of nine national daily and Sunday newspapers. Printing jobs have been lost in recent times by the closure of the Scottish Daily Express in Glasgow and the move of the London Evening Standard into the Daily Express building.

Circulation and advertising have fallen steadily and costs have risen steeply. Newsprint prices alone went up 120 per cent between 1970 and 1975 and are still rising.

Of 17 daily and Sunday national newspapers, only five made a profit in 1975.

Increasing selling prices has brought in some revenue but at the cost of continuous drops in circulation.



British newspapers labor under old-fashioned technology, manning rules.

Fleet Street managements have been saddled with heavy wage bills because of having too many workers to operate the old-fashioned hot-metal printing methods still in use. This is due to managerial incompetence in the 1950s, when circulation soared after the lifting of wartime controls. Unions were allowed to set any manning levels they chose partly because some proprietors hoped to drive competitors out of business, partly because the money kept rolling in at ever-increasing rates.

The Daily Mirror, for instance, has men in their 80s sitting doing nothing for a whole shift and drawing full pay because of old agreements that none of the newspaper despatch workers could ever be retired or fired.

No success was ever achieved by newspaper managements in reducing overmanning, estimated to be one-third in a 1966 survey by the Economist weekly. Now a printing technology is available, based on computers, automatic typesetting and photographic techniques that could realize even greater savings in manpower and provide remaining workers with secure and highly-paid jobs.

Efforts to bring in the new technology were aborted for years by printing union leaders who have now retired. These efforts were always complicated by the inter-union wars between the seven unions involved.

Now a proposal, called a program for action, has been agreed on by all 10 newspaper managements and by the leaders of six of the seven unions. Its central point is that there will be no compulsory redundancies but that 7,000 workers will be induced to leave the industry over five years by several methods. Some would get a lump sum plus their full net income for the five years. Others would get a larger lump sum immediately. Pensions also would be improved and efforts made to retrain the workers using cash from a special fund which Britain's Common Market partners are prepared to offer.

The plan includes ways of settling disputes more rapidly, to reduce the number of financially-damaging wildcat strikes. It also provides for a sharp reduction in the large number of casual workers, who mainly constitute printing workers with permanent jobs enjoying high pay for single shift work on other newspapers which must employ them to fulfil bloated manning requirements.

One of the most hopeful developments from discussion of the plan has been proposals by printing unions that they end their ceaseless bickering and amalgamate to form one large union. This would end the kind of who-does-what jurisdictional disputes that led to a rash of unofficial strikes in 1976.

Lay Off 7,000

Should the program for action be rejected by the union memberships, the arrival of modern printing methods would be delayed and the cost to newspaper managements of borrowing the money to make the redundancy payments would rise. Furthermore, the European Economic Community has made it clear the $5 million available from its social fund to retrain printers would be withheld and might not again be offered.

The leaders of the six unions that backed the plan have found, to their dismay, that there is strong resistance to it on the shop floor. This bodes ill for the outcome of the eventual ballot of the membership.

One problem seems to be that the printing workers find it difficult to grasp what is admittedly a complicated plan.

If some way cannot be found of explaining it to them and if they do not vote in favor of the plan, some of them may find in January, 1978, that they are facing a lifetime on welfare.

Veterans' Plight

Re the article in your paper, Dec. 10, Minister Talked to Most: Pickles.

As the wife of a war-disabled veteran who has been in the former Veterans' Hospital for 4½ years I would like to comment. My husband is in Kenning 2 where the minister "spoke to virtually all 46 patients." His interview with him consisted of: "How are the meals?" Reply: "They are all right." Long ago when I remarked that often the meal was cold by the time it reached the room my husband said he had got so used to it that it didn't matter. He will eat anything served to him as he has an excellent appetite and is on a limited diet so is always ready for a meal. One reason why I go daily to the hospital is to see that the directions on his diet card are adhered to. The kitchen staff is changed so often that they do not have time to learn what the patients should have and not being familiar with the process do not have time to read the cards, or else many who are employed do not know how to read. He is very allergic to certain jello dishes and his card states "no jello" yet I have found it served to him three times in a week — and I am only there for seven meals. Some staff will get him something else, some won't. In that case I have to make a trip to the kitchen to exchange it.

I would like your reporter to come with me and find out how well the patients on Kenning 2 can communicate. Some cannot talk at all. Many are fairly rational at times and others are definitely not. When I was going two and three times a day to feed my husband he would often say while I was spooning food into his mouth: "My wife didn't come today." Unless the light is just right he has no idea who is speaking to him until he is told. His sight is very poor and he cannot read or write. This caused by an inept person letting him fall and bashing his head shortly after Jubilee took over the Veterans' Hospital.

I hope during his tour Mr. MacDonald inspected the patients' bedside tables. Where they keep candy and cigarettes and oranges and apples, brushes and combs, razors and hankies and neckties, and pens and pencils, and any letters and other papers. He may have noted that the staff also add smelly soap to give the cigarettes and candy a good flavor — all this in the drawer. Underneath anything they may put there is crowded by bedding so they cannot remove it. On a locker there is a shelf which they cannot reach for photos and books; a bulletin board for postcards — which also is out of reach. There is a very tiny locker with two shelves beyond reach, a hanger for clothes too high for a wheelchair patient. The plugs for razors are out of reach. The soap and paper towels at the wash basins are out of reach. The towel and washcloth, if in the room, are also beyond reach. The minister has been informed about these things and was notified of the poor design before the alterations were carried out in all areas.

If the hospital is being properly managed why is it necessary for so much "brass" to make inspections?—Mrs. C. C. Goater, 1960 Taylor Street.

Java Jive

One pound of coffee yields approximately 75 cups of coffee made by the drip method. At 50 cents per cup of the beverage, this would amount to $37.50. Or a gross earning to the restaurateur of $33.50 should the price of coffee beans increase to $4 per pound. When restaurateurs sold coffee for 25 cents per cup and the price of coffee was at the current price of $2.25 per pound, their gross take per pound was $16.50.

In other words because the price of a cup of coffee is expected to increase from three cents to 5.33 cents, restaurateurs are seeking a 98.33 per cent increases in gross intake. Now the extra intake of $17 would buy 4.25 pounds of coffee at $4 a pound which would make 318.75 cups of the beverage. Or enough to provide 75 customers with 4.25 extra cups of coffee, if restaurateurs were not interested in making windfall profits using the increased cost of coffee beans from Brazil as the excuse. Perhaps it is our restaurants not Brazilian coffee that should be boycotted if we want to curb our inflationary spiral.—Ms. Coffee.

Save Vic. General

I am very disturbed to read in the press about the possible down-grading of the Victoria General Hospital; or worse, the possible destruction of hospital facilities at their present location.

Having personally experienced the life-saving blessing of the proximity of the Victoria General in an emergency, I can assure you that the thought of having to travel miles to get emergency treatment fills me with dread.

Build a new hospital by all means, where it is most needed, but do not destroy what is already in existence here in the heart of Victoria.

Rebuild, restore, renovate, do what is necessary to the Victoria General at its present site, or on the grounds of the old St. Ann's Academy, but do not mutilate it. Do not tear the present institution apart, nor move parts of it away.

It is imperative that a modern, updated hospital should be available in the heart of Victoria, and I beg that the Victoria General Hospital be kept where it is.

My life may depend upon it.—Mrs. R. MacDuff, Victoria.

One Thing We Can Never Change: We Must Be Caring

By MICHAEL KERNAN
Washington Post

Let the philosphers contend through the centuries about the innate goodness or wickedness of Humankind; here is a man who says the hard evidence is right there under our nose: That our much maligned race is loving and caring by nature.

"Precisely because of our prolonged dependency, we could not survive as a species or develop as a type," says Dr. Willard Gaylin, "were there not a social structure to support us."

Gaylin, a practicing psychoanalyst and president of the Institute of Society, Ethics and the Life Sciences, is perhaps best known for two books, In the Service of Their Country, on war resisters in prison, and Partial Justice on bias in judicial sentencing. His new book is Caring, which builds a closely reasoned case for our inherent goodness.

Briefly, he argues that the human infant is born too soon (most likely because at nine months the fetus' skull is rapidly outgrowing the fetal canal) and is virtually helpless for the first year, unique among all animals. During this time, if the infant is merely fed but not nurtured in other ways, it will probably die. If it lives, it will be unable to love; it will be something less than a human being.

In evidence, Gaylin quotes Freud and cites studies ranging from Bowlby's work with children or the London Blitz to Harlow's famous monkey babies and their terrycloth "mother" which they preferred to a feeding machine.

In a recent visit to Washington, Gaylin explained what his ideas could mean for the future of the family. For one thing, if human beings are the least completed of all creatures at birth, it follows that we complete ourselves, one way or another. "We are the designers of our descendants," he said, and what's more, "The way you think of yourself is the way you design your institutions."

For another thing, it may well be that raising a child in a foster family, with all the mistakes and pressures and inequities this could mean, is still better than raising it in an institution, however brilliantly it is run.

"It's sad that a lot of the underdeveloped countries are abandoning the old ways of nurturing children and going in for our institutional methods."

Today, in our competitive environment, caring is not chic, especially among men, Gaylin noted, and the parent is no longer a symbol of success but of failure. A few decades ago, if a man was a baker as good as his father, he was a success. Now, if he hasn't gone beyond his father's status to build a bakery chain or whatever, he's nowhere. In a society where everyone is expected to outdo the past, caring is a luxury. The breakdown of the male macho mystique, on the other hand, he viewed as an encouraging omen.

What about the kibbutz and the Russian state nursery?

"A lot depends on the age a child starts. There have been vast changes in Israeli Kibbutzim: They now tend to leave the first two years to primary home care, and in some places the children go home at night. The Israelis found that children raised at home smiled much more than institutional kids."

As for day-care centres, they will soon be part of our lives, Gaylin speculated, for women have a right to careers. The problem as he saw it was to find a way to preserve that first year of primary care. "Also, the trouble with some centres is that with all those kids together someone always gets the bright idea to improve 'em somehow. Educate 'em or something. When what they need is caring."

Gaylin, who is 51, has two children and lives in Hastings-on-Hudson, N.Y., has other worries about the future of the family.

He sees, on the conservative side, the defenders of the "rights of the unborn" and, on the liberal side, the "rights of children" groups. "Both of these use the word 'rights' as a code word for the erosion of the family's power. What they are doing is putting family decisions into the hands of the courts and legislatures. We should work to protect the integrity of the family. After all, we don't really have any alternative to it, do we?"

The dangers today to the human race, Gaylin said, are passivity, self-involvement and isolation. Drug-taking is of course an expression of all three

"Part of our freedom is to be different from the way we were born, but we can't go too far off from certain elements without risking the species itself. It's like the male elk, who develops larger and larger horns to better achieve his various purposes in life, only to reach a point where the horns get so huge they entrap him in the woods, his natural habitat, and cause his death.

"There are so many things we can change, or are learning how to. We can make ourselves taller, fatter, longer-lived. Pretty soon we'll be able to fly without planes, to breathe underwater, to live with artificial hearts and lungs, to manipulate behavior with electrodes in the brain, to predetermine sex — but one thing we can never change is that we must be caring. We can't destroy our capacity to love and feel, or we will destroy the species as we know it."

They Fight The Auto With Bikes

By JAMES F. CLARITY
New York Times

LA ROCHELLE, France — Three centuries ago, during the Wars of Religion, the residents of this towered and turreted Atlantic port defended themselves by pouring hot oil onto royal troops.

Today the 84,000 people of the splendidly preserved city feel besieged again — by infernal four-wheeled machines that spew fumes and noise — so they are being mobilized in a new resistance, the symbol of which is a yellow bicycle.

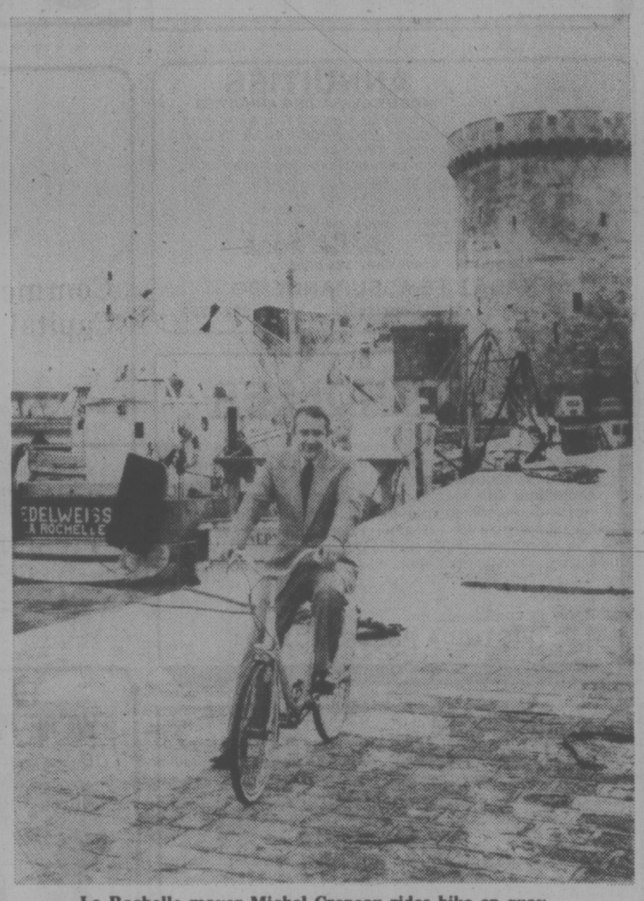
Several months ago the ambitious mayor, Michel Crepeau, put 250 bright yellow bikes, which the municipality had purchased, at the disposal of the public, free of charge, as part of his persistent campaign to give the residents more legroom and breathing space. His efforts to keep his town a pleasant place to live include a pedestrian shopping mall and plans to heat over 800 apartments with solar energy.

The favorite project is the bicycles, and if the mayor is not La Rochelle's easiest rider, he is its most noticeable and vocal one. "The automobile must be desanctified," Crepeau said as he mounted a bike and went a few yards for an exemplary, if wobbly, ride along a quay. Fishermen watched, smiling as if they would be amused if he veered and fell in the water.

Dismounting, the 46-year-old Crepeau, one of the leaders of the small but active Radical Left party in France, added: "When people use the automobile for necessary transportation, that is one thing. But when a man uses it as a sign of social status, that is something else. Then there are also those people who become swine when they get in their cars."

Crepeau, who does not deny that, as a mayor, National Assembly deputy and party leader, he is ready to accept a higher place in French politics, explained how the bicycle campaign had been going. Of the 250 originally placed on the streets for daylight use, 30 have been stolen and dozens more bent and broken. Still, he said, another 250 will be bought, partly subsidized by the national government; they will be sturdier and will have signal lights and reflectors so they can be used after dark.

"Oh yes, the bicycles," a young woman said in a separate conversation. "They are a good idea, but try and find one. People have ruined them." Still, even without the mayor around to personify the campaign, visitors noticed several bicycles being used by residents for shopping or for trips to a waterfront cafe.



La Rochelle mayor Michel Crepeau rides bike on quay

The mayor, who usually drives a car or is driven on his daily round of the city, took visitors on a walk through the area of the pedestrian mall — six narrow old streets closed to traffic and repaved with handsome flat stones, where recorded music replaces auto sounds.

By the statue of Eugene Fromentin, the region's best known painter, he said, "You are right, my friend," to a policeman who had chased several teen-agers with motor bikes out of the mall. Gesturing at the crowds doing Christmas shopping or going on their daily tasks, Crepeau said that merchants were apprehensive about the mall but had found that at the value of their businesses had doubled in a year.

By the spring, Crepeau said, 830 apartments in the city will get most of their hot water from a solar apparatus developed, with public subsidies, by a local fuel dealer. "The dealer will save 50 per cent of the development cost," the mayor said, "and the consumers will save 15 per cent on their water bills."

Another of Crepeau's innovations, revolutionary for France, is the separate collection of different kinds of garbage on different days. The city sells some of it for a few cents a pound. "It was difficult to get people accustomed to it," the mayor said, "so we used the children in a campaign to bring empty plastic mineral-water bottles to school. Eventually their parents said O.K., and now we even make a little money out of our garbage."

Students Teaching Students The Best Way to Learn?

By EDWARD B. FISKE
New York Times

Nine-year-old Kathy Liriano is in the third grade at P.S. 156 in the South Bronx and is two years behind in her reading. In order to help her improve, the school arranged for Ana Celia Torres to meet with her five times a week and give her individualized tutoring.

Ordinarily there would be nothing unusual about such a step. In this case, however, the tutor is only 12 years old and in the fifth grade at the same elementary school. Moreover, Ana herself is reading at least two years below grade level.

The pairing of underachieving students in a tutoring relationship is one example of a growing trend to enlist students to help other students in their academic work.. "Youth tutoring youth" projects began to proliferate in the early 1960's as part of the general climate of educational innovation. Now they number more than 10,000 and have become a fixed part of the program in hundreds of school districts across the country.

Tutor Benefits

"Kids will often learn more effectively from other kids than they will from adults," said Jack McGarvy, a teacher who has used the method at the Bedford Junior High School in Westport, Conn. Perhaps more surprising than this is the fact that while the tutee gains, it is the tutor who benefits most, both academically and socially.

A recent half-hour session between Kathy Liriano and Ana Celia Torres is typical of how the method works. The tutor, Ana, who had received a week's training, showed up at a classroom set aside for the tutoring program and picked up materials that had been carefully selected by the school staff. She then went to Kathy's classroom, and the two sat down together in the hall just outside the door.

Ana had Kathy match words on small cards with those written on a master sheet, and then she helped her write sentences using words that Kathy had previously had trouble reading. While Kathy was completing her assignments, Ana used the time to look through the dictionary. "I see words that I haven't seen in the dictionary in my classroom," she explained. "Like 'fireworks.' That's what you light up on the Fourth of July." At the end of the session Ana returned to the tutoring room, filled out a brief questionnaire about the session and then wrote about it in a journal she is required to keep. "She is a very good girl today," she wrote.

Understanding

The program is one of eleven such projects in various schools in District 7 in the South Bronx that are funded by special grants from New York State. David J. Salembier, who co-ordinates it, said that students from the junior high or upper elementary grades are chosen to work with younger students if it is thought that the experience will help them with their own academic or behavioral problems. "As long as students know the alphabet, there is someone they can help." he stated.

Not unexpectedly, studies show that as in any teaching situation, the amount of benefit to the child who is trying to learn varies. Usually the tutee shows some gains, presumably for reasons such as the absence of an authority figure and the fact that the two students are likely to understand each other.

Research at the University of Wisconsin and elsewhere shows not only that the tutor benefits most but that in some cases the gains are substantial. Mary Kohler, whose National Commission on Resources for Youth has trained 3,500 persons in the techniques of student tutoring, reported one project in Newark in which the tutors improved their reading levels by 3.5 years in 5 months.

No one is sure of the reasons for such successes. In the case of tutors without major problems of their own, teachers say that the gains come from giving students a sense of responsibility. In the case of underachieving inner-city students, other factors are involved. "A lot of these kids think they are failures," said Martin Chasen, a fifth-grade teacher at P.S. 156. "Tutoring gives them a sense that if they try hard enough, they can accomplish something."

Educators see student tutoring as a tool that can be used to address some basic problems in education. Frank Riessman, a professor of education at Queens College, believes that the major problem of 'compensatory" education programs is that they continue to view the student as a "victim."

Some Problems

Sophie Bloom, reading coordinator for District 10 in Chicago, sees student tutoring as a means of replacing the competitiveness that characterizes so much of American education with an attitude of cooperation.

But tutoring has problems. In some cases, for instance, teachers have resisted efforts to introduce the method out of fear that it threatens their professional role.

Another problem is that tutors sometimes take their role too seriously and begin to mimic negative aspects of teachers, including excessive means of enforcing discipline.

District 7 had such a problem last year with a junior high school student who happened to be the leader of a youth gang. He was enthusiastic about being a tutor and reported steady academic progress on the part of his tutee. Then the tutee's parents called the school to complain that their child had been intimidated at knife point during tutoring sessions.

"The tutor was using the only kind of discipline he knew," said Mr. Salembier. "He was running the tutoring the way he ran his gang. We brought him in for retraining and suggested that he already carried enough authority without the knife."

STRAY FEATHERS

Cats and Feeders Don't Go Together

One of my neighbors has a big, fluffy white cat. As near as I can figure, that cat spends as much time in my yard as it does in its own, and for good reason: there's a bird feeder in my yard. And from a cat's point of view, there are few more enticing attractions in life than a concentration of birds.

I take this method of introducing this second part of my little dissertation on feeding birds — the so-called "how" part — because before anyone commits himself to a bird feeder, they'd better sort out the cat problem.

If you have a cat of your own, forget about feeding birds; the two just do not go together. If your neighbor has a cat, and that cat is allowed to roam at will, then you had better come to some arrangement with your neighbor before you start, or there will be nothing but friction after you do.

In short, cats and brird feeders are incompatible and everything you do in planning your feeder and its location should be done with this in mind.

Fortunately, there is a rule — the Fifteen-foot Rule — that can help solve most cat problems. The Fifteen-foot Rule is an invention of mine that grew out of several agonizing months of watching cats take birds — take, in this case, means kill — at a feeder at a former Hosford home. They were months during which I learned something of the magnificent hunting ability of so-called domestic cats. It seems that, in most cases anyway, domestication does little to take the edge off a cat's hunting ability, even a well-fed cat. Given a short-shot at a bird, even up to 10 feet, a cat is as lethal as a bullet. Beyond that, the odds begin to edge in favor of the bird; thus my Fifteen-foot Rule.

Basically, the Fifteen-foot Rule means keep your bird feeder at least 15 feet away from any potential cover for cats. This won't eliminate the cat problem — cats are patient blighters that can fool even a wily old crow into believing they are nothing more than a stump or rock — but it will even the odds a little.

Enough about cats; on to windows.

Next to cats, windows are your most serious concern. It is nice to have the feeder close to a window; what better way to watch the birds — and the opportunity to watch the birds is the real reason we're feeding them — but that window can be a death trap too. In the pell-mell scrambles that often take place at a bird feeder, that invisible barrier can be almost as lethal as a cat.

So, if you want the birds up close to your window, make sure you cover it with thin curtains that are transparent from the inside. Then you can see out and the birds are not fooled by the reflecting surface of the glass.

Third consideration for potential bird feeders is protection from the elements. The elements, in this case, are represented by wind. Rain is a bit of a problem in these parts — it gets everything wet, which is more a bother to us than it is the birds — but an exposed, windy location will turn them off quicker than anything else.

I know this from experience. My present feeder is in such a location — out of necessity — and it often goes days — windy days — without attention. Sparrows, juncos, jays, starlings and crows will accept some wind but chickadees, creepers and nuthatches avoid wind like the plague.

Well, if after considering these three problems there is still a spot in your life for a bird feeder, you can begin to consider the hardware — the trays, feeders, hoppers and what have you.

I've always been a firm believer in simplicity when it comes to bird feeders; a simple open tray — with a rim about an inch high around it — has always been quite acceptable to the birds. Occasionally, when I'm doing some photography, I'll add a small stump or a branch. This too appears to be quite acceptable.

Covered feeders may help protect your offerings from the weather but they seem to affect the freedom of the birds a bit. Short, hanging logs, with holes full of food, are ideal, particularly for nuthatches and chickadees. And, better still, they seem to restrict the activities of starlings which, next to cats, you will find are your greatest source of annoyance. Starlings are gluttons; they can take over a feeder. They are bullies, gobbling up everything before the "good guys" get a chance, and generally make themselves thoroughly objectionable around the place.

But, why not be like me; if starlings are all I can get, then let it be starlings.

No Snow Hits Ski Resorts

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Canada's ski resorts are drawing good crowds in the east but lack of snow has place western resorts in the doldrums.

The imbalance in the skiing business was emphasized in the past week when Ted Mountain Recreations Ltd. of Kamloops, B.C. went into receivership.

Co-owner Robert Dilworth blamed lack of snow for a 40-per-cent drop in season ticket holders. "We estimate we lost $100,000 over the holiday season."

Meanwhile, resorts in Quebec and Ontario are reporting booming business on the slopes. In addition, the late start in the west has brought many of those skiers to hills in the east.

For example, about 15,000 skiers visited Ontario's Georgian Peaks from Dec. 23 to year-end.

"What was really lucky for us what that it never got so mild that we couldn't make snow," said Gordon Canning, general manager of Blue Mountain Resorts Ltd. of Collingwood, Ont. "and we had good snowfall throughout Christmas."

Blue Mountain's revenue doubled in December.

Poor conditions in the west have helped even the small operations, such as Hidden Valley Highland Ski Club near Huntsville, Ont. The club had two record days in December with about 1,200 non-club skiers on the hills.

However, Hans Nischan, manager at Hidden Valley, said business may return to more normal levels when the western resorts get snow.

In Quebec, business has been described as probably the best in Canada.

The government-owned Park du Mont Sainte-Anne near Quebec City has beent attracting between 5,000 and 8,000 skiers every day.

Even the smaller resorts like Gray Rock Inn Ltd., near St. Jovite, are getting big crowds.

"This is the best skiing we've had in quite a few years," said Lorraine McEvoy of Gray Rocks. "The hotel is booked."

The Canadian national ski team is training in Quebec because of a lack of snow in the west.

While mild weather has caused serious problems in B.C., the situation is not as bad in Alberta.

Sunshine Village in Banff, Alta., had a late, mediocre start but conditions are starting to improve.

"No one else had snow over Christmas, so we set new records," said John Gow, general manager of Sunshine. On Dec. 29, Sunshine had about 4,200 skiers while nearby Lake Louise reported about 5,700 that day.

Snow-making equipment is helping the Banff area resorts maintain reasonable skiing conditions.

Coastal B.C. areas have been particularly hard hit because of mild weather and what one official described as continual sunshine.

Grouse Mountain Resorts Ltd. of Vancouver has been hard hit.

"It is beyond grim," said John Hoegg, president of Grouse Mountain. "The basic weather pattern has set all kinds of records, beyond anything anyone can remember."

Grouse has been earning about a tenth of the normal daily revenue of between $20,000 and $30,000.

"Our greatest concern is that we just finished an $8-million capital expansion, which includes our Super Sky Ride tramway," said Mr. Hoegg.

Huge Zinc Find in Yukon Waits for Exploitation

HOWARDS PASS, Y.T. (CP)—A bedded sedimentary lead-zinc deposit discovered in the Yukon's Howards Pass has all the indications of being the world's largest. But Dr. Dave Sinclair, a geologist with the federal northern development department in Whitehorse, said the deposit is years away from production.

"Largeness doesn't necessarily mean it is profitable," said Ed Lawrence, project manager for Canex-Placer, the company whose geologist-geochemist crews first recognized the deposit in the Selwyn Mountains in 1972.

"There is much work to be done to tie the whole geological picture together," Lawrence said in an interview.

The Howards Pass deposit has some unique characteristics—there is none of its type in production elsewhere in North America—which were a topic for technical papers presented to a geoscience forum in December in Whitehorse.

The deposit is located on 700 mineral claims that stretch into the adjacent Northwest Territories and is a joint venture between U.S. Steel and Canex-Placer, the wholly-owned exploration arm of Placer Development.

Lawrence, who spent 12 years with Placer Development's operation division at the Salmo lead-zinc and tungsten mines in British Columbia's Kootenays, said the Howards Pass type of lead-zinc is unusual because its fine-grained nature can cause metallurgical difficulties.

Rather than separating the metals into two concentrates, a less-desirable bulk concentrate may have to be produced.

The metal recovery must be acceptable and the ore concentrate marketable before production can be considered for a deposit with both an open-pit and underground mining potential.

Lawrence said a low-grade ore that can be mined profitably elsewhere in Canada might be only good road fill in some Yukon areas because of the tremendous capital investments required to make a northern mine operable.

James Bay Hydro Scheme Last of the Big Dams

MONTREAL (CP) — Quebec's $16.1-billion James Bay hydroelectric project will probably be one of the last major hydro power developments in Canada, the Bank of Montreal says in its January business review.

The bank said thermal generation plants powered by coal or nuclear reactors will become more important in meeting future electricity demands, while tidal power could be harnessed in coastal areas.

It quoted projections by the federal department of energy, mines and resources which indicate that the proportion of Canada's energy needs met by electricity will climb to 31 per cent in 1990 from 26 per cent in 1975.

In the same period the total amount of energy requirements derived from crude oil will decline to 40 per cent in 1990 from 44 per cent in 1975.

The bank study noted that the world's fossil fuel supply will likely be exhausted some time in the next century and greater efforts to conserve non-renewable resources are necessary.

But the long-term solution to the energy problem lies in developing renewable energy sources such as solar radiation, wind and biomass. Biomass is vegetable matter which can be burned to produce heat or decomposed to make gas.

Until recently Canadians considered themselves rich in energy at a time when other western industrialized countries were dependent on gas and oil imports which were rising sharply in cost.

But the belief that Canada has plentiful and cheap energy evaporated as new oil and gas discoveries did not meet expectations and the cost of new projects such as James Bay and Alberta's Syncrude plant climbed sharply.

HOUSE MOVERS got an unusual request when they were called on to cart off a water tower at the site of an apartment development at Verdier and West Saanich Road. The site is the former Brentwood Motel and developers plan to restore the tower as part of the development. Logically enough, the project will be called Brentwood Towers.

POLICE HUNT RACIST HOODS

TORONTO (CP) — A special police squad has been formed to hunt for three white men who attacked a Guyanese immigrant in a subway station, police said Friday.

Insp. Hugh Boyle said Indal Narine, 22, was knocked down and kicked while waiting for a train about midnight Thursday night, the third racially-motivated assault on the subway system in less than a week.

Extortionist Gets Probation

A 35-year-old Victoria man, found guilty of extortion Wednesday, was given a suspended sentence Friday in Victoria County Court and placed on probation for two years.

Judge M. L. T. Drake told Daniel Robert O'Brien, 1145 Mason, he agreed with the jury there was an extortion "but the circumstances of it cast another complexion on it."

He warned O'Brien that if he faced any difficulties with the law during his probation, he was liable to be returned to court to face sentencing on the extortion.

Malcolm Berge, who was 15 at the time, told the jury he was taken to O'Brien's house Aug. 8 and said O'Brien told him "I'll scatter your brains across the street" unless the youth paid him $150 needed to pay his lawyer because he had been caught with unlawful possession of a firearm.

Defence counsel Mike Hutchison said another man who figured in testimony at the trial, Daniel White, was also charged with extortion but was acquitted by county court Judge E. J. C. Stewart.

He said seven pounds of marijuana, which Berge admitted he stole from a house next door to O'Brien, belonged to a man named Fowler and not to O'Brien.

Fowler had sought assistance from O'Brien because of this theft and the theft of a stereo set and O'Brien through "stupidity, frustration and anger" became involved and then "threw in his two-cents worth, the $150 suggestion."

He said O'Brien did not represent a threat to the community, had a job with the education department still open to him and had no criminal record except for one impaired driving conviction in 1972.

Crown counsel Don Farquhar disagreed with the suggestion that O'Brien became involved because of stupidity, arguing there was "a very serious involvement" by the man, made more serious because of the age difference between him and Berge.

On another matter, O'Brien was fined $250 for possession of a restricted weapon, a 9 millimetre Luger pistol, in Victoria Aug. 2. He pleaded guilty Dec. 24.

Court was told the weapon was part of a collection of Second World War pieces and was fired three times into the air at O'Brien's house by another man without O'Brien's knowledge.

Insulation Loans 'Not Enough'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Jean Douglas, president of the British Columbia branch of the Consumers' Association of Canada, said Friday it is not enough for B.C. Hydro to lend money to help finance home insulation improvements.

Ms. Douglas said she would like to see homeowners receive outright grants from the government to subsidize insulation costs.

B.C. Hydro announced Friday a proposal to offer its customers loans of up to $500, repayable at 10 per cent over two years to finance insulation costs.

Ms. Douglas said the CAC has no way of knowing if the rate increases are justified because Hydro does not have to hold public hearings before taking such action.

"Despite the fact Hydro is a Crown corporation it should have a public hearing," she said. "We're always asking for public accountability."

Ms. Douglas said that while Hydro has said it will use revenue from increased natural gas rates to finance more exploration, she would like to see the public practise restraint in energy use to reduce consumption.

She said she could not see rates going down significantly in B.C. this year.

The CAC's major thrust this year will be trying to develop a food policy aimed at providing an adequate supply of quality food at reasonable prices.

Ms. Douglas said the association sent a brief to B.C. Consumer Services Minister Rafe Mair in November calling for a complete review of the province's marketing boards, but has yet to receive a reply.

She said marketing boards are more concerned with producers than with consumers and that there is little or no consumer involvement in marketing board actions.

B.C.'s high food prices have been blamed on high wage and transport costs, but Ms. Douglas said that in adjoining Washington State, which has only slightly lower wages and about the same cost of living, milk costs 10 cents a quart less.

She said studies should be done to determine the cause of higher food prices.

"We've got to get figures and studies to prove or disprove this."

Tow Privilege Ends For Vancouver Police

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police chief Don Winterton said Friday he has ordered policemen to stop receiving benefits from Buster's Auto Towing in the form of free release of their private vehicles that have been impounded for parking violations.

He also said that he will investigate a published report that police, prosecutors, judges and lawyers have engaged in gambling in the basement of a hotel near the police station.

The chief said he sent a letter to Carl Vanderspek, owner of the towing company, asking him to treat police the same as any other customer.

Chief Winterton said no more than five per cent (about 50 on the 955-member force) had been involved in the towing benefits.

Vanderspek, who took over Buster's Towing about a year ago, said he understands from long-time employees that the free release of impounded private cars of policemen has been a Buster's practice for about 30 years.

Under the policy, police were not charged for bylaw impoundments and were charged half of the regular fee of $25 for private impoundments.

The chief said the matter first came to his attention Dec. 1 and he was treating it seriously.

"We wrote Buster's and we are satisfied they have changed their policy."

Vanderspek said he became aware of the long-standing practice several months ago. He didn't like it and went to the policeman's union to see what could be done about it.

An investigation within the department followed and resulted in the chief's memo which said in part:

"An examination of this (Buster's) policy indicated that it has evolved over the years on the basis that our members could retaliate against Buster's by wholesale ticketing of their vehicles or by steering business away from that company.

"There is no hard evidence of this type of behavior, however, the suggestion that Buster's policy has been developed on this basis is a scary proposition."

Vanderspek said no-charge freeing of police members' vehicles is fairly widespread among towing companies in major North American cities but it should be eliminated.

"After all, we don't like towing for nothing," he said.

The gambling investigation resulted from remarks by Bruce Eriksen, spokesman for the Downtown Eastside Residents Association, to a newspaper columnist.

Interviewed on Friday, Eriksen, an unsuccessful mayoralty candidate, said "the big game" in the hotel basement had been common knowledge in that area of town although he had not personally witnessed the game in progress.

RANCHER AID PLAN RAPPED

PENTICTON (CP) — The federal program of price support for cattle ranchers discriminates against British Columbia, says Jim Hewitt, provincial agriculture minister.

He said he has not received details of the federal program, but objects to the part which says cattle men in provinces which already have a price support program may only get 50 per cent of the federal support.

Those in provinces which do not have a support program will get 100 per cent support.

Hundreds Sit-In

MADRID (AP) — Hundreds of person staged sit-ins in churches today as part of a demonstration for amnesty for political prisoners. Reports said the move was especially significant in the Basque area, home of the majority of those imprisoned.

Salvage Claim Settled

VANCOUVER (CP) — A salvage claim against a Panamanian freighter which ran around at English Bay in March, 1975, has been settled out of court, the towing company said Friday.

The claim was made by Seaspan International against the owner of the freighter Long Beach which was pushed to shore by winds reaching 60 to 70 miles an hour.,

Seaspan, which sent tugs to free the freighter, had demanded the ship as salvage.

Doug Osborne, Seaspan operations manager, would not reveal the settlement but said it was more than a towing service charge.

A similar Seaspan case involving the Greek freighter Anelli, which collided with the Long Beach at one point, has not been settled.

Both ships were in danger of hitting the city's Burrard Bridge during the storm.

SHUT BY LIENS

MATSQUI (CP) — Subcontractors' liens have kept a completed 53-unit townhouse development empty for four months in this Fraser Valley community.

The townhouses were built for the provincial government by Cedarhurst Properties Ltd. and were originally expected to be turned over to the Housing Corporation of British Columbia for handling by the B.C. Housing Management Commission in March, 1975.

The cost of the project rose by about $10,000 a unit, raising the contracted price of $1.9 million to $2.5 million.

Cedarhurst ran into financial difficulties and couldn't pay subcontractors, who put a total of 20 separate liens on the project.

Humphrey

Humphrey Treated

WASHINGTON (WP)— Hubert Humphrey will get his fourth treatment this weekend as one of the patients in a pilot program to use powerful chemicals to keep bladder cancer from recurring.

He will enter Bethesda (Md.) Naval Medical Center for the therapy, which is planned by doctors at New York's Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center where Humphrey was operated on for cancer of the bladder in October.

"We are hoping and believe he is cured," Dr. Willet F. Whitmore, Humphrey's surgeon, said in New York Friday. "But in the event there is any residual cancer, we hope the chemotherapy will shrink it." The Democratic senator from Minnesota underwent surgery last fall after an incipient kind of bladder cancer began to spread.

His doctors later reported that the cancer had advanced from the bladder to nearby lymph glands before it was removed, though they were able to cut out the glands and all the cancer.

But they also recommended "adjunct chemotherapy" — use of anti-cancer chemicals after surgery — and Humphrey agreed.

"There have been no definitive tests in bladder cancer so far of the drugs we are using, because until very recently we couldn't be sure they'd show enough good to justify their toxicity," Whitmore explained.

Soviet Arms Issues Queried by Congress

WASHINGTON (WP) — Congress is entering the Battle of the Estimate now raging within the intelligence community over the possibility that the Soviet Union threatens to surpass American military power, or may already have done so.

The inquiries on Capitol Hill centre on the recent disclosure that a panel of outsiders, who take an alarmed view of Soviet military intentions and capabilities, has been brought in to challenge the official committee is looking into the question of whether the official estimates were slanted by this procedure. The subcommittee collection, production and quality of intelligence is headed by Sen. Adlai Stevenson (Dem.—Ill.).

Another inquiry has been started by Sen. William Proxmire (Dem.—Wis.), a senior member of the Senate's defence appropriations subcommittee.

A Senate intelligence subgovernment estimates of Soviet power.

Proxmire asked the joint chiefs of staff whether they agree with a published military claim that "the U.S.S.R. already has achieved military superiority over the United States" and that the Soviet Union "is not only aiming for superiority but preparing for war."

The Senate foreign relations committee, in an initiative taken before the current dispute about U.S. intelligence estimates, is planning early hearings of its own on the U.S.-Soviet strategic balance. It intends to start with witnesses from outside the government.

Together, these inquiries, and perhaps others in the House, encompass a controversy that will coincide with debate over the new defence budget, and the Carter administration's plans for intensified U.S.-Soviet nuclear arms control negotiations.

Sen. Proxmire said "There is a tendency in the military establishment to cry wolf at (defence) budget time."

Proxmire is questioning the use of a panel of prominent critics of U.S.-Soviet detente policy, led by Prof. Richard Pipes of Harvard, in the internal debates over the current top secret official estimate of Soviet military power. Central Intelligence Director George Bush co-ordinated the unusual adversary process in which the outside panel reinforced "worst case" analysts inside the government, especially in Military intelligence.

"Do we let one outside group with known hawkish tendencies influence our estimates?" Proxmire said. "What would happen if it became known that our intelligence estimates were being influenced by a high-level group of forceful personalities committed to disarmament?"

"The intelligence community needs intellectual stimulation from outside its closed confines," Proxmire added. "But to limit that stimulation to one philosophy, to one ideological group is to do violence to the concept of intelligence free from pressure."

LITTER JEST ain't natural, says Cascade Jack, otherwise known as John Eckerson. Washington state's department of the ecology hopes to make Cascade Jack a star, in the spirit of Smokey the Bear.

Asbestos Research

NEW YORK (AP) — The International Asbestos Workers Union and the Johns-Manville Corp. — the largest U.S. asbestos producer — are jointly sponsoring a research centre for a cancer often associated with exposure to the mineral.

The centre, first of its kind, is at the Mount Sinai School of Medicine in New York and will concentrate on early diagnosis and treatment for mesothelioma, a cancer which affects the lining of the chest or abdomen.

The co-directors of the centre are Dr. Irving Selikoff, head of the environmental sciences laboratory at Mount Sinai and a pioneer in asbestos research, and Dr. James Holland, head of the department of neoplastic or cancerous diseases.

VOLUNTEERS FLOCK TO SAVE LIQUOR

BAKER, Ore. (AP) — Firefighters, aided by an unusually large number of volunteers, tried in vain Friday to save a flaming railroad boxcar loaded with gin, whisky and other spirits.

The Union Pacific freight car was bound for Seattle when sparks from sticky brake shoes ignited its wooden floor east of here. The car was taken to Baker to allow easier access by firefighters.

With temperatures well below freezing, the firemen battled the blaze, but cold water splashing on the hot glass destroyed most of the booze. Other bottles were broken when soggy cardboard cartons fell apart while being moved.

The area reeked of liquor long after the fire was out, witnesses said.

Teamsters, Pickers Settle

LOS ANGELES (WP) — The Teamsters Union and Cesar Cheves' United Farm Workers of America have reached what sources here Friday described as a "substantial agreement" to end their long battle for the right to represent farm workers in California and other agricultural states.

According to senior state officials here who asked not to be named, the agreement gives the teamsters the right to organize and represent farm workers involved in mechanized jobs and the UFW the right to organize and bargain for the field hands.

Spokesmen for both unions declined to comment on any possible agreemtnt, but Marc Grossman, a spokesman for Chavez noted Friday that Chavez did announce Dec. 22 that the two unions were meeting and that he was "very optimistic" that an agreement could be worked out.

A pact between the two unions would resolve one of the most bitter jurisdictional disputes in U.S. labor history.

TAPES NOT FOR PARTIES, NIXON PLEADS IN COURT

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former president Richard Nixon does not think the White House Watergate tapes should be played on television or at cocktail parties.

Nixon's lawyers, in an appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court, say that general release of the tapes would lead to their exploitation.

They asked the court Friday to overturn a decision by the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Washington permitting release of the 30 White House tapes played during the Watergate cover-up trial of Nixon's top advisers.

The circuit court ruled in a 2-to-1 decision last October that the tapes are no longer confidential.

Nixon's appeal said release of the tapes could "place the subpoenaed materials in the hands of private parties to be broadcast on television, to be marketed in the form of phonograph records and cassettes, to be played at cocktail parties and in satiric productions, and to be exploited in any other fashion."

It also said release of the tapes could prove damaging to Watergate coverup defendants who are appealing their convictions.

The Treasury Board
The Treasury Board functions as the financial, management and priorities (in the specific sense) Committee of Cabinet. The staff agency to the Treasury Board (The Budget Bureau) provides analytical services and advice with respect to the evaluation of programs initiated and administered by a variety of departments and agencies. The evaluation, which focuses on the annual budget, considers the current policy thrusts of the government, the costs and benefits of programs, the social and political aspects, as well as the relative merits of the proposals in the context of competing claims on resources.
The Budget Bureau is structured on a functional basis as follows: Human Services (Health and Welfare), Economic Development, Education, and Transportation. Each area is headed by a Senior Analyst who supervises the work of several Program Evaluation Analysts. The work is extremely challenging and the job of public expenditure analysis has never been more critical.

The Committee also acts as a clearing house for new and major thrusts in government programming leaving the questions of resource allocation to Treasury Board. The staff to the Planning Committee, the Planning and Research Branch of Executive Council, are involved in broad and sectoral economic planning, research and analysis. In addition, the Branch provides the staff work associated with intergovernmental relations of the more general nature.

3 MONTHS FOR THEFT

Samuel Taylor Karaim, 22, was sentenced Friday in Victoria County Court to three months in jail for breaking and entering and theft at Burnside Pharmacy, 30 West Burnside, on Oct. 23.

Crown counsel Peter Birkett said Karaim, who pleaded guilty, broke the glass of the front door and stole five bottles of pain killers worth $64.

Karaim has a criminal record, compiled since a serious motor vehicle accident in 1970, involving possession of marijuana, breaking and entering and theft, dangerous use of a firearm, breach of probation, driving while prohibited, two counts of uttering forged prescriptions and two cases of theft under $200.

Defence counsel Darrel Woods said Karaim suffered a bad leg injury when he was a passenger on his brother's motorcycle which was struck by a drunk driver. He had to wear a full leg cast for 20 months.

Judge M. L. T. Drake said it "looks pretty plain this accident and the consequences could probably be said to be responsible for the state of affairs today."

In sentencing him to three months, he said he was taking into account Karaim's 2½ months in custody awaiting disposition of his case.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Eric Paul Marks, 19, of 9866 Resthaven Drive, Sidney, was remanded without a plea until next Friday on a charge of criminal negligence and was released pending the posting of $500 bail.

Marks was charged after a four-mile chase Thursday night along the Pat Bay Highway which ended when the vehicle plunged over a 30-foot bank and was demolished. The chase began on Carey Road, and Saanich police said it reached speeds of 90 miles an hour.

Marks also pleaded guilty to Oct. 11 charges of driving without insurance, driver's licence and licence plates. He was fined $250 on the first charge and $35 each on the last two.

Marks elected trial by judge and jury on the criminal negligence charge but Judge William Ostler stood the case down and requested legal aid lawyer Sheryl Dunn to speak to Marks.

Miss Dunn represented Marks at the bail hearing and had the case remanded one week so that Marks could obtain legal counsel.

Ostler handed John Wesley Edwards, 30, a 10-month sentence for escaping lawful custody.

Edwards, court was told, escaped from William Head prison on Aug. 5 with two other persons with the help of a female accomplice and a boat.

Edwards was arrested Nov. 5 in Calgary for possession of a revolver.

Crown counsel Robert Milligan said that Edwards was serving jail terms for breaking and entering, theft and possession of stolen property when he escaped.

Attacker Jailed

Norman Claude Vandal, 24, was sentenced to six months in jail Friday by Victoria County Court Judge M. L. T. Drake for assualt causing bodily harm.

Court was told the incident occurred Feb. 24 at Douglas and Burnside and arose from drinking and jealousy after the complainant had arrived at Vandal's house with the accused man's wife.

Vandal has a criminal record involving robbery with violence, possession of stolen property and fraud. The assault occurred while he was on probation.

Defence counsel Douglas Christie said Vandal's problems related primarily to alcohol.

The judge said "there seems to be a steady deterioration, you are getting into a bad state" and ruled the six months must be served after Vandal completes a six-month jail term for fraud.

Court System Explained

Laymen about to become witnesses in civil or criminal court cases will have a unique chance to learn about the court system in a series of seminars.

Witness Demystification begins Monday at 7:30 p.m. in Courtroom 3 of the Provincial Court building at 633 Fisgard.

The free seminares are also open to members of the public who are not involved in court cases.

Patty Appeals Her Jailing

SAN FRANCISCO — Patricia Hearst has appealed her bank robbery conviction on grounds the trial judge made faulty evidentiary rulings which "all but dictated the verdict of guilty."

The 99-page appeal was filed by her lawyers Friday in the 9th U.S. circuit court of appeals and charged several errors were made by U.S. district Judge Oliver J. Carter, who died after the trial but before the newspaper heiress' sentencing.

The 22-year-old newspaper heiress was convicted on March 20, 1976, on charges of being a member of a Symbionese Liberation Army team which robbed a San Francisco bank. She was sentenced to seven years in prison but released on bail in November, pending the appeal.

She faces trial in Los Angeles on charges of kidnapping, robbery and assault for a shooting incident at an Inglewood, Calif., sporting goods store a month after the robbery.

Miss Hearst was kidnapped by the SLA in February 1974, and the bank was robbed on April 15 of the same year.

VANCOUVER — The University of B.C. has granted Dr. David Suzuki an unpaid leave of absence for half of this year and half of next year to do television programs. Suzuki said he will continue to carry his full teaching load, however. He was criticized last year for doing radio and television programs while receiving 60 per cent of his $28,305 a year salary on "study leave."

DOWNEY, Calif. — A coroner's examiner probing the remains of a 65-year-old man who died in a hospital this week pulled out a rubber surgical glove lodged in the victim's esophagus. The coroner was called when Roma Owings died unexpectedly Tuesday night at Downey Community Hospital. He had been under care since October with Parkinson's disease and a skin infection.

The autopsy report said Owings suffocated on the glove.

MONTEGO BAY, Jamaica — Police Friday said they had identified two of four robbers who broke into the house of Lady Sarah Roubanis, one of them raping at knifepoint the tall, blonde Vanderbilt heiress and cousin of the late Sir Winston Churchill.

The four men, reportedly under the influence of marijuana, shot one of Lady Sarah's house guests in the arm and were believed to be the same men who shot up the homes of two of her neighbors in a luxurious Montego Bay winter haven for members of the international jet set. A gardener was wounded in one of the shootings.

Lady Sarah, 55, apparently acting on advice of her lawyer, Paul Delisser, denied to Kingston newspapers Friday that she had been raped. But Chief Inspector Oliver Grandison of the Montego Bay sector of the Jamaican police, said the case was officially listed as "a case of rape."

LOS ANGELES — Ten days after Murray Kaplan died, his widow received a letter from the Los Angeles school district where he was a teacher. Kaplan had been paid for the day after he died and the district wanted $57.69 back.

"We are very sorry to hear of the early death of your husband," the letter said. "Please accept our sincere sympathy. However, we regret to inform you that an audit of his salary payment reveals that he was overpaid a net amount of $57.69."

Carole Kaplan has since received a few apologies from school officials, but she says they still want the money.

Kaplan, 53, had worked for the school district for 27 years when he died Oct. 7. His last pay cheque was for the period through Oct. 8.

Mrs. Kaplan, also a teacher, has been out of work for 18 months with a medical disability. Her four children range in age from seven to 22. She told the school district she would pay when she could afford to.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. — William Pawley, a former U.S. diplomat and wealthy businessman, committed suicide Friday, police said. Pawley, 80, suffered from shingles, a painful nerve disease. Police said he left a nott saying he shot himself because of his health.

A Long Walk... Then the Trial

ASPEN, Colo. — French-born singer Claudine Longet hopes this weekend will pass quietly. She hopes to take long walks through snowy woods. She hopes to listen to classical music. She wants to hold her children.

On Monday, Miss Longet begins her trial in the shooting death of pro skier Vladimir "Spider" Sabich, her lover. She contends the shooting was accidental.

"I feel emotionally exhausted," she said Friday after the 12 jurors who will hear her case were chosen.

"I plan to take long walks in the snow, hug and kiss my children and listen to some quiet music to prepare for the ordeal ahead."

Jury selection took most of the week and twice Miss Longet broke into tears when she heard potential jurors exused because they said they could not convict a mother of three.

"I have a soft spot for her children," said Pamela Beck, whose child plays with Miss Longet's 12-year-old daughter Noelle. "I would have a difficult time making a decision knowing that this family would be torn apart as a result.

"Those children have already been tormented."

Miss Longet turned away from the gallery as Mrs. Beck was excused and wept. The day before another juror asked to be dismissed because he also had compassion for her because of her children.

Other jurors questioned, however, expressed little sympathy.

"Based on what was presented in the news at the time, and based on rumors I had to listen to all summer, I would tend to convict," said Jefferson Tippet, who was excused.

"The first thing I was told about a gun was to make sure it was not loaded and not pointed at anyone unless you intend to kill them."

Another excused juror, Pat Butner, said Miss Longet's innocence was questionable because she was handling a loaded gun.

"She knew it was loaded," the woman said. "Anyone who points a loaded gun at somebody should not be surprised at what happens. I don't think most so-called accidents are accidents."

Harrod's Readies For Action

LONDON — At their posts, 5,000 regulars, their ranks swollen by reinforcements of 2,000 temporary recruits, waited for it to begin. All staff leaves were cancelled. Four television crews stood by to record the scene for history.

A military exercise? No, opening day Saturday of Harrod's new year sale.

On the same day last year, the famous London department store took in $5 million. This day Harrod's management expects the cash registers will engulf $5.1 million.

"It's very like a battle," said managing director Robert Midgley. "I expect Montgomery used to feel like this, planning Alamein."

WHY CHAIRS IN PAIRS?
The next time you're considering new chairs for your home, you might think about "chairs in pairs".
TONI
There are many advantages to buying twin chairs.
A main advantage is that chairs in pairs help to unify a room, leaving you free to assemble other distinctive pieces you want for contrast and individuality with the two chairs bringing desired unity. Chairs in pairs help give you harmony if other things are mixed. This can really give you the best of both decorating worlds.
Another advantage of chairs in pairs is that they help you simplify furniture arrangements in a room. By their very nature they can suggest a beautiful setting.
It's wise decorating to seek out twin chairs. They can be more practical for you, and add new dimensions of splendor to your home.
And chairs in pairs do not necessarily have to be exactly identical. Manufacturers make chairs that go together but are still somewhat different and stand on their own, so to speak. Either way, whether the two chairs are exactly identical, or are just related twins, be sure to look for chairs in pairs when you go furniture shopping. And we'd be happy to have you do your furniture shopping here. Stop in.

In the Dark Hours, a Lonely Vigil for Survival

Darkness shrouds the sombre truth each night for most of us.

While we sleep the sleep of innocence, there are men taking up their positions on the sidewalk for a lonely vigil in the cause of survival.

They wait, these men, outside the locked doors of Canada Manpower on Fort Street, clinging to the faint hope that when the doors open at 7 a.m. there will be a job for them for that day at least. Usually, there is no job. The wait has been in vain. But they'll be back again, the hardy ones at any rate, for the same wait the next night. And so it goes on.

It was a degree or two below freezing point when I joined the lineup at 6:30 on Thursday morning.

I was fifth there and Jean, the one they call "The Crazy Frenchman," was at the head of the queue. He'd been there since 5 a.m. but said he was "late." Normally he's there at 4 a.m., for being first or among the first few anyway is all important. If you're at the head of the list there's a chance you'll be hired when the contractors start calling for extra labor for the day or maybe for half a day.

That's if they call. And often they don't.

"I've been out here as early as 1:45 a.m. — and there have been four already in front of me!" a guy named Steve told me. "They had sleeping bags and blankets and were all curled up on the sidewalk. You can't beat that."

Even if you do beat it timewise, there's no guarantee you'll get work. Many queue much of the night and then wait most of the day and go home with nothing.

As the regulars tell it, chances are roughly 50-50 in the good months and in the bad months like December the odds are 25 per cent for you and 75 against. They figure that in a week, anything up to 60 hours of waiting can bring them around 15 hours of work. Steve, for example, has been there every day bright and early but has worked only four days in the last month.

Nineteen-year-old Michael McGraw wishes he could be as lucky as that! He lives at Shawnigan Lake, has no car and because he has to rely on a ride into town, can't make it into the Manpower office until 8 a.m. By then, he's way down on the list. He has been turning up religiously each week day for three months now and so far hasn't had a single day's work.

Michael, like quite a few of the others, is critical of Manpower.

"The service is lousy, they just tell you to look at the boards," he said. "They should be offering us some training, instead."

Others complain of inhospitality. The washrooms are kept locked early in the morning when the men are let in and the wait starts all over again. And many say a cup of coffee would welcome. But there is nothing.

What a hell of a system for a country like Canada and in this day and age, you say. And I agree. And we wonder why they bother, these men.

Well, they want to work, they say, and while there is a queue there is hope.

So each morning, long before we are up, they are there with brown paper lunch bags and long faces. For it is not a jolly existence. Most are quite depressed, many cynical.

As Steve said, sure it gets depressing sitting around for six or seven hours or more and then nothing.

But Jean, the Crazy Frenchman, isn't depressed. He's the Charlie Chaplin of Victoria's unemployed.

With his pathos, his charm, his humor injected into a sombre mood, he has kept the spirits of the men who wait in vain alive for six months now.

"You can come in, too," Jean told me with a twinkle in his eye as the doors opened. "It's a federal public place and since you're No. 5 you can sign your name and wait here and if you're lucky, you may be called at 3 p.m. And I can tell you, after two days you will have had enough. But not me. I'm stubborn. When your stomach is empty, you have to be stubborn for the next loaf of bread."

Jean is 45 and single. He has been in construction work all his life, came to B.C. from Montreal in 1970 and says he's lucky he doesn't look at life in a negative way.

"Most people would be depressed but not me — I'm a philosopher," he explained. "I still compare myself lucky to the people of Bangladesh. But still, you've got only one person in 1,000 who would think like me. Most people compare themselves to others they see around them and they become depressed when they see what others have.

"We have to wait in the cold, often in vain, sure. But don't we all have to wait, even when we work? That's life. We wait for the great Expectation but it is imagination. All we really want is a little bit of human communication. That's all. But nobody seems to have time.

"But I do. I have time. And I can give time to care. I can't give these men jobs but I can give them words of hope. And even if they call me the Crazy Frenchman, they like me."

Contractors, who rarely pay over the $3 an hour minimum wage, insist men find their own way to jobs, bring their own lunches or go hungry and then often keep them waiting ages for their pay, drew fire from the waiting lineup.

"If you're married, the contractor figures he has to give you more; if you're single he figures you're good for nothing," laughed Jean.

"They have excuses for all season. In December work is slack because it's the holiday season; in winter it's cold; in spring it's too rainy; in summer we don't need you thanks, we've got all the students we want; and in fall it's windy and getting slack again.

"So it turns in a full circle and meanwhile there's inflation and deflation and you wonder if there's a fifth season where maybe you'll get a chance.

"But you know," Jean said with a parting smile, "if you can take the whole thing philosophically, you're okay. But if you take it seriously . . . you hang yourself after three weeks."

Crime Dip Credited To Increase in TM

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

The rate of crime in British Columbia dipped in 1976 and the Victoria president of the Student's International Meditation Society says the main reason is — TM.

In fact Dan Scoones, 24, a student at the University of Victoria, said Friday that earlier scientific research indicates the crime decline was inevitable because the number of TM adherents in B.C. climbed to one per cent of the population last year.

TM stands for transcendental meditation, a technique which its adherents say can make a person more energetic, perceptive, creative, productive, more content with life. It involves meditation for about 20 minutes twice a day, a sort of recharging of mental batteries.

Scoones was commenting on a story from Vancouver earlier this week in which John Hogarth, B.C. police commission chairman, said the general pattern of crime in the province last year showed a downward swing.

Detailed statistics will be released at the end of this month but Hogarth said it appears "people today are more interested in looking for stability and the 1976 crime figures show this."

Stability is one of the things TM brings to people, its supporters claim, and the research paper Scoones offers in support argues that once the number of TM adherents in a community reaches one per cent of its population, they exert sufficient influence to turn the crime rate down.

The crime rate in Victoria, where an estimated 7,000 people have been instructed in TM technique in recent years, dipped slightly last year, he said.

But Vancouver reached its one per cent of TM practitioners in January a year ago, a total of 10,000 which has now grown to 13,000, he said. Now the province as a whole has passed the one per cent mark.

The research study was completed last July by Dr. Candace Borland and Garland Landrith, MA, psychologists on the faculties of Maharishi universities in Switzerland and Iowa.

Maharishi Mahesh Yogi is the Indian sage and scholar who is founder of the "science of creative intelligence" which uses TM.

The researchers compared 11 American cities where TM adherents had reached one per cent of the population with 11 other similar American cities and measured crime rates.

They said later their results are consistent with a prediction made by the Maharishi that when about one per cent of a population practises TM, a "phase transition" in society toward more harmonious functioning will occur.

JAILED MAN COLLECTS UIC

Pay day for Jack Wayne Hollinger, 24, of Saanich, didn't stop when he went to jail — he still got almost $1,200 in unemployment insurance cheques.

"Quite incredible," said Judge William Ostler when he heard details of the case in Victoria provincial court Friday. "No wonder the fund gets into difficulty."

He fined Hollinger $50 on seven of eight counts of filing false claims for UIC benefits and then sent him back to jail on another matter.

Crown counsel Paul Jarman told the court $1,196 was involved in the UIC charges of which $100 has been repaid. Hollinger pleaded not guilty to the eighth count and Jarman requested a week's remand to consider his position.

Defence lawyer Ted Hanman said the cheques were sent to Hollinger's home address and were brought to him in prison for signature.

Hollinger, of 3433 Bethune, also got a five-day jail term after pleading guilty to wilful damage. Court was told he struck a parked car Dec. 23 at 3568 Tillicum and then kicked and damaged a door trying to get at a witness.

UVic Prof Charges Bonner Preparing N-Power Case

By AB KENT
Times Staff

A Univeristy of Victoria economics professor charged Friday that B.C. Hydro chairman Robert Bonner is preparing a case for nuclear power by raising electricity rates.

Dr. Leonard Laudadio, professor of resource economics and chairman of the department, was commenting on electricity rate hikes effective March 1 and Bonner's statement that nuclear energy is imminent in B.C. in about 10 years.

"I think Bonner is emotionally committed to this notion of nuclear energy. With this increase in rates he is preparing a case for nuclear energy," Laudadio said.

"It's a Mickey Mouse form of accounting he's using," the economist added.

Laudadio said it is his opinion that electrical generation from nuclear sources is "totally unnecessary at this stage," besides being very dangerous.

Not only are there still vast untapped hydro-electric oower resources, but unexplored possibilities for the development of coal-thermal power in B.C., the professor said.

In addition, he said, solar energy is being researched and developed at a rapid pace and indications are that it will be no more costly than nuclear energy for domestic purposes.

Laudadio expects there will be so much progress in solar energy research in the next 15 years there will be no need for nuclear power plants.

He acknowledged that Canada so far has done only

LAUDADIO
. . . unnecessary

small amounts of solar energy research, "but we should at least have the decency to wait for the results of U.S. research."

But a UVic colleague, associate professor of physics Dr. George Beer, holds a distinctly different view from Laudadio and believes a small Canadian-made nuclear reactor would provide the ideal package for power development on Vancouver Island.

Beer, who teaches a course in physics of the environment and energy resources, said B.C.'s life style and industrial base demand huge blocks of power.

"We like the very good life, and that goes with consumption of huge amounts of electrical power," said Beer, who believes it is unlikely people will reduce their demands.

Speaking of B.C. as a whole, Beer said it appears hydro sources will be able to supply electricity for a while, particularly in the north. But the high cost of transmission over long distances makes development of these natural sources increasingly less attractive.

He said he would have to review the latest growth and load figures to make more detailed comment on mainland power requirements, but feels alternative power would be required.

Vancouver Island is largely dependent on mainland sources for electricity, he noted: "Personally, I don't like the idea of more transmission lines across Vancouver Island."

And undersea transmission cables have their disadvantages as well, being subject to marine accidents and earthquake damage.

clear power for potential accident risk and waste disposal problems.

The lead-time required for existing nuclear power plants is seven or eight years, said Beer.

Conventional nuclear power plants use breeding reactors, which produce a waste product with long radioactive life, one of their chief disadvantages.

The much more satisfactory process of nuclear fusion — with no hazardous end products — has not been perfected but scientists hope it may be a safe power source by the end of this century.

Beer commented: "We've been waiting for the fusion reactor since about 1955 and there is still no prototype."

Even if there is a sudden breakthrough in its development, perhaps 20 years of lead time would be required before it could be used as a commercial source of electricity.

Dr. Robin Riddihough, an earth physicist for the department of energy, mines and resources, said dumping nuclear wastes at sea is not completely safe and drilling deep holes in the ocean floor to bury waste capsules would be expensive and temporary.

Canada has started some research into dry-land disposal of atomic wastes, Riddihough said. The Geological Survey has begun examining granite in the Canadian Shield to determine its suitability for burial of radioactive material.

Granite is very hard, does not fracture easily and occurs in large masses.

Riddihough noted that B.C.'s Coast Range is virtually solid granite.

He also said he is not satisfied that all B.C. electricity needs can't be met by hydro power.

SEEING DOUBLE, Times photographer John McKay used pasture fence along Keating Crossroad at Central Saanich to frame this tranquil view of sedate horses taking breakfast. Frost on the turf doesn't deter them so maybe frozen grass is the same as ice cream to the equine set.

Brief Relief Seen In Crosswalk Feud

Temporary relief may be in sight for the mothers who have voluntarily been helping school children cross the Trans-Canada Highway at Harriet Road.

Norman Zapf, construction director for the highways ministry, said when a widening project starts in the area, the ministry will assume responsibilty for ensuring a safe crossing exists.

"During construction, if we have to put out adult crossing guards, we will," he said.

But the long-range solution — a pedestrian tunnel at Seaton Road when the highway widening project is completed — is not what the mothers want.

Seaton is too far away, they say, and the mothers fear child molesters may lurk in the lengthy tunnel which will extend under four lanes of roadway.

In the meantime, mothers like Mrs. Mary Hannah, of 119 Crease, will continue to work as voluntary crossing guards because they feel the crossing is dangerous.

Children living north of the highway must attend Tolmie Elementary School on the south side.

"I won't let my kids go under the tunnel," Mrs. Hannah said, adding even if there is a decent crossing at Seaton, it would be so far away children would never use it.

She said it added at least two-thirds of a mile to the walk to school. "You have to go north to get south."

Parents living in the area want the highways department and school board to take a long, hard look at the problem, she said.

A pedestrian operated signal at Harriet or Wascana would be the best solution, they feel. Children living further up the highway have that advantage at Tillicum when they cross to Hampton Elementary School.

"We can't let this go. They (school board and highways) are going to get a fight from us.

"My husband and I have even talked about moving," Mrs. Hannah said, adding that they would have to go into debt just so their child could go to school in safety.

Apartment Vacancies Increase

The apartment vacancy rate in the Victoria area was 0.6 per cent in October, up from 0.3 per cent in April, Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation said today.

The vacancy rate has risen to 10.4 per cent in newly-completed buildings, up from 3.6 per cent for the same type of accommodation in April.

For older apartments, the vacancy rate was only 0.3 per cent, up from 0.2 per cent.

The trend is expected to continue through 1977 with some forecasts putting the over-all vacancy rate up as high as three per cent across the Victoria urban area by summer.

In October the vacancy rate was 0.8 per cent in James Bay, 2.1 per cent in Esquimalt (up from 0.1 per cent and 0.7 per cent respectively).

Vikings Hit Peak

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

Gary Taylor, former coach of the University of Victoria Vikings basketball team, rushed up to his successor, Ken Shields, outside the dressing room at McKinnon Gym Friday night.

"It was a great second half," Taylor told Shields. "I've never seen them play better."

Shields didn't need to be told. He and about 800 fans had just seen the Vikings trample the heavily-favored Calgary Dinosaurs 85-55 in a Canada West University Athletic Association game. They broke a 33-33 halftime tie by scoring 52 points in the final 20 minutes while muzzling Calgary's big guns to just 22 points.

The victory, Vikings' fourth against three losses in league play, moved them within two points of the first-place Dinosaurs and they can pull even with a duplicate performance tonight at 8:30 when the teams meet again at McKinnon.

UVic Vikettes kept their winning streak intact in Canada West women's play Friday by downing Calgary Dinnies 71-53. Vikettes now are 7-0 in league action, 12-0 overall, 27-0 in league games over two years and 35-3 overall in two seasons.

Vikings performed superbly all the way. Lee Edmondson survived three early fouls to score 28 points with a 63 per cent shooting average from the floor. Jim Duddridge had 23 points and a 53 per cent mark while Robbie Parris scored 20 with a 58 per cent average.

Parris was nothing short of amazing. His quick ball control had the taller Dinos befuddled and he came up with a streak of outside shooting when the Vikes most needed it — early in the second half.

As a team, Vikings shot a fine 53 per cent from the floor.

Even so, the first thing that came to Shields' mind in analysing UVic's win was defence.

"The big thing was we had to play defence, eliminating the easy shot and making them work for their points," he said.

The statistics bear him out. Forced outside, Dinosaurs had a field-goal average of only 37 per cent and were forced into 24 turnovers, 10 more than the Vikings.

But the most telling statistic was rebounds, a category in which Calgary leads the league. There were 43 rebounds off the Viking backboard and UVic grabbed 30 of them. Duddridge snared eight, Edmondson and Parris six each and rookie Ted Anderson, continuing to improve with each game, got four.

UVic hauled in 11 of 28 rebounds off the Calgary board, six going to Edmondson and three to Parris.

Only two Dinos hit for double figures, Greg Hess scoring 15 points and Lyle Leslie 14.

Shields didn't overlook the offence.

"We had to keep our poise," he said. "We lost it for about five minutes late in the first half, but we regained it in the second half."

The poise vanished after Edmondson got his third foul at the 15-minute mark. Shields rested him and Calgary wipe out a 10-point UVic lead to pull even at the intermission.

But Vikings opened the second half with eight straight points on baskets by Edmondson, Duddridge and two by Parris.

Led by Shelley and Leslie Godfrey, Vikettes built a commanding early lead in the women's game and survived a scrambly second half.

"It was about what I expected from Calgary," coach Mike Gallo said. "They're a scrappy team. I think they had us playing their kind of basketball in the second half. I've got to compliment their coach (Marilyn McNeil). She's done a tremendous job in the space of a year. That ball club was nowhere near this level last year."

Marg Mainwaring was Vikettes' leading scorer with 19 points while Shelley Godfrey counted 18 points and led both teams in rebounding with 13. Leslie Godfrey added 13 points.

Tops for the Dinnies was Jackie Shaw with 12 points and 11 rebounds.

Vikettes won on shooting accuracy, the only category in which there was a marked difference. The winners had a 41 per cent field goal average, the losers 21 per cent.

Vikettes and Calgary also play again tonight at McKinnon Gym starting at 6:30.

At Saskatoon Friday, Saskatchewan Huskies ended a 30-game losing streak stretching over two and a half seasons by beating Lethbridge Pronghorns 99-68 in a Canada West men's game while Saskatchewan Huskiettes exploded for a 106-34 women's triumph over Lethbridge.

At Edmonton, Alberta's Golden Bears took a 93-86 decision over the University of British Columbia Thunderbirds and the Alberta Pandas defeated the B.C. Thunderettes 95-60. Amanada Holloway, last year's scoring leader, scored 35 points for the Pandas.

VIKINGS (85): Robbie Parris 20, Chris Hebb 8, Lee Edmondson 25, Grant Boland 4, Jim Duddridge 23, Ted Anderson 5, Mickey Welder, Dale McLoughlin, Tom Watson, Warren Wagstaff, Ian Hyde-Lay.
CALGARY (55): Ray Verbeek 2, Lyle Leslie 12, Mike Santiago 8, Ian MacKay 4, Greg Hess 14, Phil Christie 3, Allan Coutts 2, Eric Duerksen 2, Richard Foggo 7, Matt Friesen 1.

VIKETTES (71): Mairi Anne Longmore 2, Yeta Dilala, Janis Turner 3, Patti Peskievits, Delphine Zarikoff 5, Leslie Godfrey 13, Brenda Smith 2, Marg Mainwaring 19, Ronni Hind 5, Shelley Godfrey 18, Marie Morrison 4.
CALGARY (53): Joanne Licisin, Dominique Varem 4, Anne Miller 2, Barb Stewart 2, Shirley Booth 6, Jackie Shaw 12, Lauri Nelson 8, Linda Nickolychuk 4, Dawn Sprung 6, Hilly Jackson 9.

THE BIRD was part of the story at the Racquet Club Friday night in the first round of the south island women's curling playdowns as Phyllis Bird of Victoria Club skipped her rink to a 10-5 victory over Jan Sarkissian of Playland. Play continues today and Sunday. See story.

The Dailey Boy Gets His Chance at Top

Some notes and like that, and yes, it is true. The "Dailey" recently listed as a jockey at Santa Anita, is the same Randy Dailey who rode at Sandown Park last fall and took jockey honors by riding 32 winners. Randy hasn't had many mounts at Santa Anita but he did ride at Bay Meadows before the Santa Anita meeting opened, brought down a few winners, and apparently is well thought of. It's not that easy getting a mount at those meetings as the competition is tough and the other riders very good, so it's nice to see he is at least getting the chance. He is a personable young man of 17 and has the ability to become a winner.

And speaking of racing, how's this for a new gimmick? Credit-card wagering is the newest game in town, or soon will be at Popmano Park, Florida, if everything goes according to plan. The Florida harness track has received approval for the innovation. Computerized terminals for the experiment are being installed throughout the clubhouse enabling patrons to make a wager simply by inserting a plastic card similar to a credit card. Patrons will deposit money at the track, bet against their account and then balance out at the end of that night's program.

And if you think that's handy, maybe you should try Quebec. Because now you can buy your favorite numbers in Lcto Quebec (mini, inter, super, perfecta) up to a year in advance with a specially-designed Lotomatique credit card. It's so simple that you pick your favorite numbers in the province's four major draws, read the small print to get the cost for the year and mail your cheque. Then you're in business for the next 52 weeks. And if you happen to win, don't worry, the computer will be the first to do the read-out, and your winnings will be in the mail post haste.

Baseball pitchers run into arm and back problems from time to time and it isn't unusual for the fast-ball pitcher in his youth to be the control-ball specialist in his waning years. Time takes its toll and the fast ball loses its zip. The same can be said for fast bowlers in cricket. A Melbourne doctor has warned all speedsters, including the Australian pair of Dennis Lillee and Jeff Thomson, to stay clear of English county competition. He said it was beyond the physical limits of modern fast bowlers to survive 12-months-a-year bowling for more than a few seasons.

It's Super Bowl time, or will be at Pasadena on Sunday, and naturally everyone is making much of the fact that two finalists, Minnesota Vikings and Oakland Raiders, are the most celebrated bridesmaids in the history of the event. They've never won even though they have been perennial division and conference champions; and maybe even neither of the teams should be there Sunday because of what went before. But they are.

The Raiders really didn't deserve to beat New England Patriots in their first playoff game. The Patriots still claim, and probably will forever and a day, that they were jobbed by the official. Still, the Raiders showed their ability to come through in the clutch, which always is the mark of a champion.

The next out, it was no contest, though. The Raiders simply outplayed the defending champion Pittsburgh Steelers, making mince-meat of the vaunted Steeler defence.

The Steelers, it should be explained, didn't have their fine tandem of running backs Rocky Bleier and Franco Harris; and without them they went nowhere. So who did Oakland beat?

On the other hand, the Vikings didn't exactly look like world beaters against Los Angeles Rams after they had disposed of the doddering Washington Redskins rather handily in their playoff opener. And quite frankly, they didn't deserve to win. But they did and that's why they'll show up against Oakland Sunday.

It should be a good game, both teams having much to prove. The Raiders probably have the best passing game while the Vikings have, in George Foreman and Brent McLanahan, the superior runners. The defences are about equal; Oakland is better in the punting game; the Vikings have the more disciplined team and Oakland is likely the . . . er roughest—in a violent sport.

The winner? Not so easy. The betting line says Oakland, and has done since the Raiders disposed of the Steelers, and the margin has been listed as anywhere from three and one-half points to five.

And you know what? This time the odds-makers are right. Oakland by seven.

Totems Balance Record

Victoria High Totems evened their Greater Victoria High School Boys Basketball League record at 1-1 Friday night with a 58-57 overtime victory over Spectrum at Spectrum.

Jim Wong fired the winning basket with just over a minute remaining in the extra time. Wong led Totem scorers with 16 points while Dan Lissowski and Ian Bridge each had 14. Harbinder Sangarah paced Spectrum with 21 points. Dave Shokar had 14.

Spectrum girls defeated Princess Margaret of Vancouver 49-18 in an exhibition game. Wendy Lubinich had 15 points and Joanie Wong 14.

At Salmon Arm, Victoria High Tigers trimmed Westwood of Winnipeg 40-22 to advance to the semi-finals of a girls' tournament against Vernon today. Terry Paone topped the Tigers with 12 points.

At Campbell River the Cowichan Timbermen boys' team scored a 71-50 victory over the home-town Tyees.

Legion Blocks Truckers

Esquimalt Legion simply had too much firepower for Lake Cowichan Bairds Trucking in a South Island Junior "B" Hockey League game at Esquimalt Sports Centre Friday night.

Trailing 3-1 after the first period, Legion broke, the game wide open with four goals in the second period and cruised from there to an 8-5 victory.

Murray Allen and Keving Kennedy each had two goals for the winners. John Entzminer, Gerry Lindal and Kevin Parks had singles. Scott Morrow had two for Lake Cowichan while Shindy Kalar, Glen Smith and Dale DeBodt got the others.

Lindal later received a match penalty and will be suspended indefinitely pending action by the B.C. Amateur Hockey Association, it was reported.

Goalkeeper Bruce Morrow of Lake Cowichan made 36 saves, 20 in the third period while Rick Berry and Dave Waight combined for 21 stops in the Legion goal.

Southern League Facing Collapse

By The Associated Press

The Southern Hockey League, in precarious shape for some time because of declining attendance, has all but died.

"Realistically, it's pretty hard to say we will continue," said SHL commissioner Jack Riley in Pittsburgh, where the league has its headquarters.

The seven-team league lost the Greensboro and Richmond franchises when they folded Tuesday. Winston-Salem and Tidewater threw in the towel Friday, leaving Charlotte Checkers, Baltimore Clippers and Hampton Gulls still operating.

Charlotte owner Gar Laux said a meeting of Riley and the remaining owners was tentatively scheduled in Richmond to discuss the next step.

Laux said the Checkers would play in Baltimore next Friday. After that, he said there probably would be no more games this year.

"I'm disappointed," Riley said. "But we've felt all along that it was a struggle. We thought we might turn it around this year.

Garraway Rink Defeats Martin

Helen Garraway of the Racquet Club skipped her rink to an 8-4 victory over former Canadian seniors' champion Flora Martin of Victoria Curling Club in the opening round of the south island women's playdowns at the Racquet Club Friday night.

In other games, Ruby Niemeyer of Victoria Club defeated clubmate Shirley Burley 8-5; Phyllis Bird of Victoria downed Jan Sarkissian of Playland 10-5; Ollie Reid of Playland trimmed Blanche McCallum of Oak Bay 10-6; Helen Griffin of Playland defeated Hilda Dobereiner of Oak Bay 7-3; Judy Christenson of Victoria got by Fernande Hawkes of the Racquet Club 10-6; Tere Batters of Playland won from Isobelle Heller of Mill Bay 10-6 and Carmel Marshall of Esquimalt defeated June Boyd of Oak Bay 11-6.

Play continues today and Sunday. Four rinks will qualify from the 18-rink competition for the Island final to be held at Duncan, Jan. 14-16.

N. SHORE SCUTTLES DATE WITH SCORPIONS

Victoria Scorpions scheduled basketball doubleheader tonight and Sunday against North Shore Mountaineers of the Dogwood League has been cancelled due to the inability of North Shore to field a team.

The cancellation forces postponement of a clinic Scorpions were to give players of the Victoria and District Amateur Basketball Association prior to tonight's game.

Scorpions' sponsor Ian Scott Moncrief will protest North Shore's failure to meet their commitment to Doug Ruttan, president of the B.C. Amateur Basketball Association.

Cougar Slump Month Old

Victoria Cougars will try to end a month-long slump when they face Medicine Hat Tigers in a Western Canada Hockey League meeting at Memorial Arena tonight.

The Cougars, who have managed only four ties in their last nine games, haven't recorded a victory since defeating Regina Pats here on Dec. 4.

The slump has been costly. The team opened last month with a grip on the Western Division's top rung.

The winless run has dropped Cougars 10 points behind New Westminster Bruins and four behind second-place Kamloops Chiefs.

"It hasn't been a good month," admits coach Pat Ginnell. "A good run will take us right back into the thick of things, but we've got to get moving . . ."

Tonight, he hopes.

The Cougars lost more ground to the Bruins Friday when New Westminster rallied to edge the visiting Tigers 3-2.

In other games, Lethbridge Broncos and Calgary Centennials battled to a 5-5 draw, Brandon Wheat Kings dropped Saskatoon Blades 6-3 and Winnipeg Monarchs piled more woe on Regina by defeating the Pats 8-3.

It was Regina's 31st game without a victory.

The game in Calgary, comparatively mild for two periods, erupted with a donnybrook midway through the final period.

Three players from each team were tagged with game misconducts for failing to go to the bench when the battling started between goaltender Rollie Boutin of Lethbridge and Calgary's Grant Morin.

Fireworks also marred the Brandon game.

The final two minutes and 24 seconds of the second frame were delayed to the start of the final period after a fighting incident.

Saskatoon goalie Geoff Brand was injured and removed on a stretcher during the fight to which he was a spectator.

Blades' coach Jackie McLeod alleged Brand was speared in the side. Dave Semenko of Brandon and Blades' Wes George continued their fight on the way to the dressing room after being handed game misconducts by referee Ian Sandercock of Regina.

Most of the players left their benches to view the office brawl and when they dispersed, Brand remained prone on the ice.

Brandon took eight of 14 minor penalties, six of 10 majors and one of two game misconducts.

CITY WELL REPRESENTED IN NOMINATIONS LINEUP

Three Victoria athletes and one city team have been nominated for honors at the annual B.C. Sports Federation Awards banquet next month.

They are Philip Delesalle, Debbie Scott, Jack Rowe and the Bate men's softball team.

Delesalle is a gymnast who won the Canadian championship last year and was a member of Canada's team at the Olympic games.

He has been nominated in the junior division along with Mimmo Marello, a wrestler from Vancouver, and Shannon Smith of New Westminster, a member of the bronze-medal 400-metre freestyle swimming team at the Olympics.

Scott is the B.C. high school cross-country running champion and a student at Claremont High School. She has been nominated in the high-school division with diver Tracey Jones and volleyball player Roy Dawson, most valuable player in the provincial championships.

Rowe is a veteran track and field performer nominated in the Masters division along with table-tennis star Frank Karika and Canadian senior men's racquetball champion George Morfitt.

Victoria Bate, Canadian women's softball champions and co-holders of the world championship, have been nominated in the team category with Simon Fraser Clansmen soccer team, which won the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletic Association championship, and the Lindsay Davie-Sparkes curling rink, winners of the Canadian ladies senior curling championship.

Vancouver's Greg Joy, winner of a silver medal in the high jump at the olympic Games and recently voted Canada's male athlete of the year, tops the senior division.

Others nominated are Gail Amundrud, a bronze medallist on the 400-metre relay swimming team at the Olympics and golfer Jim Nelford, who won his second straight Canadian Men's Amateur golf championship at Royal Colwood Golf Club in August. Victoria's Joyce Yakubowich was the senior winner in 1976.

The awards will be presented at a banquet at the Hyatt Regency Hotel on Feb. 4.

Raiders Four-Point Favorites

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Finally, Oakland Raiders and Minnesota Vikings can decide between themselves which team remains the National Footbal League's winningest collection of losers.

On Sunday, starting at 12:30 p.m., PST, 86 men will get together and play the Super Bowl game for a lot of money and pride in the citadel of post-season college football, the Rose Bowl.

The rain which has plagued the week's practices is expected to end before Sunday. The Raiders will take the field as four-point favorites. And one of the teams will win the NFL title which for so long has eluded them both. Each member of the winning team will get $15,000 a man, the losers $7,500 apiece.

Coaches John Madden of Oakland and Bud Grant of Minnesota have been under intense questioning all week:

"How much pressure do the Vikings face, having lost three Super Bowls?"

"If the Raiders win, will they finally get rid of the label that they can't win the big ones?"

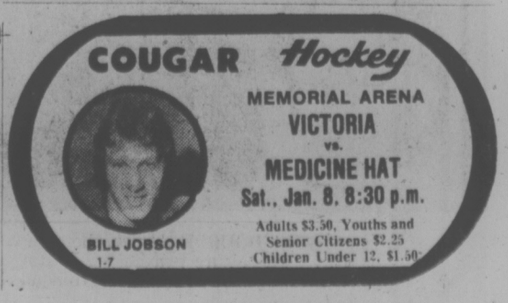
In quarterback Ken Stabler, the Raiders have The Snake, a sinister-looking man with his scraggly beard and whiplash arm, capable of delivering a ball on a line to a target 50 yards or more away.

He threw for 27 touchdowns, more than anyone else in the league this year. He gained more yards per pass than anyone and completed a greater percentage of them.

In Fran Tarkenton, the Vikings have The Scrambler, an elfin-looking man with his cleanshaven face, frustrating with his churning feet, capable of running his pursuers into coronary occlusion, th dumping off a pass to turn a loss into a gain.

He threw for more yards and for a better pecentage than anyone else in the National Conference this year—and owns every major career passing record in the league.

It is a game which, the oddsmakers agree, will be close. And it is one in which the Vikings, those oddsmakers contend, will get it in the chops once more to further extend their mastery of futility.



Cincinnati's In-Law Woes Go a-Packing

By The Canadian Press

Coach Terry Slater thought that if he could just get his mother-in-law out of the house, things would fall back into place for his slumping Cincinnati Stingers.

And sure enough, it worked.

"My mother-in-law is back in Canada and all's right in the world," said Slater after his Stingers ended a seven-game losing streak with a 7-1 win over Birmingham Bulls in a fight-marred World Hockey Association game Friday night.

His mother-in-law's arrival in Cincinnati last month signaled the start of the skid and, quipped Slater: "I've been telling by wife to get her out of here. She finally went back to Canada today."

In Friday's other WHA games, Quebec Nordiques defeated New England Whalers 7-3, Edmonton Oilers beat Calgary Cowboys 4-1 and Houston Aeros and Minnesota Fighting Saints tied 1-1.

The Stingers scored three goals in the first five minutes and went on to win their first game since mid-December. Dennis Sobchuk, Barry Legge and Dennis Abgrall started the rout and Richie Leduc later added two goals.

Cox Bags $1,600, $450 for Fergie

CHANDLER, Ariz. — British Columbia golfers collected only minor shares of the purse in the National Golf Association's fourth annual San Marcos Open here Friday.

Winner of the event was Mike Shea of New Orleans with a 72-hole total of 280, while the top Canadian was Bob Cox Jr. of Vancouver who had a final round 76 for a 290 total. Cox earned $1,600 for his 16th place finish.

Victoria's Cec Ferguson had a final round 78 for a total of 299. He earned $450. Dave Barr of Kelowna had a 75 for 300 and took home $350.

Shea, who had a final round of 71, won $5,000. Ted Zoin of Oklahoma and Jeff Thompson of Phoenix were tied for second, three strokes behind the leader.

Vancouver's Muncie Booth did not turn in a final card.

Golf's New Crop Very Impressive

PHOENIX (AP) — Johnny Miller, from the secure position of advanced age 29, shook his head of blond hair and sighed: "Ah, these young kids. There's always a new crop coming along ready to take over.

"I stand out there and watch them—this guy Pate is really tough—and I say to myself, 'hey, I used to be able to putt like that'."

The object of Miller's wonder, Jerry Pate, had just rolled in four birdie putts in the 12-to 15-foot range and established a two-stroke lead halfway through the $200,000 Phoenix Open golf tournament, the kickoff event for the 1977 tour.

Pate has a 134 total, eight under par on the 6,726-yard Phoenix Country Club course.

"I'm just glad to be around for the last couple of days," said Miller, the pre-tournament favorite. "For a while it looked like I might not make the cut."

Miller had a second-round 69 and a 143 total, nine shots back of Pate, the young man who's threatening to replace Johnny as the game's bright, young Golden Boy.

Also at 143 was Toronto's George Knudson who fired a second-round 70.

"Over-all, I wasn't too pleased with the way I struck the ball," said Pate, 23, who won the U.S. Open, the Canadian Open and the Pacific Masters in Japan as a rookie in 1976—perhaps the most impressive performance by a first-year man since Jack Nicklaus in 1962.

Despite his concern, he held a two-shot lead over George Burns and Larry Nelson, tied at 136. Burns had a second-round 69 while Nelson chipped in twice, once holed it from a sand trap and needed only 25 putts on his way to a 68.

It worked out well for the sophomore centre and New York Islanders at the Omni in Atlanta as the Islanders, who have been having trouble winning lately, edged the Flames 5-4 in one of three National Hockey League games.

In other action, Cleveland Barons hammered Vancouver Canucks 8-4 and New York Rangers came back to tie Colorado Rockies 4-4.

In Atlanta, J. P. Parise deflected Trottier's 30-foot shot past Dan Bouchard with 2:21 left Friday night to give the Islanders the win.

It was the second power play goal of the night for Parise, who also had an assist.

"I knew I had three or four seconds to shoot," said Trottier. "I wasn't shooting for the corner or anything, just the net."

Parise and Bob Nystrom were both standing near the net and Trottier said he knew in case he missed the net, one of them could get it.

In Richfield, Ohio, the Barons, who have been woeful offensively, put on their best offensive display of the season against Canucks' netminder Curt Ridley.

The Canucks, who have been one of worst teams defensively this season, carried a 2-1 lead into the second period, but Phil Roberto ignited a four-goal outburst with his first of two goals with 30 seconds gone in the middle session.

Cleveland's Ralph Klassen scored a short-handed goal, the Barons' first of the season, at 2:47 of the second period to give Cleveland the lead for good. Wayne Merrick made it 4-2 at 4:04.

Rick Blight narrowed Cleveland's lead to one with a goal at 6:12 of the second period, but Dave Gardner retaliated with an unassisted power-play goal at 7:40.

The Barons wrapped up the victory, outscoring Vancouver 3-1 during the final period.

In Denver, Phil Esposito's goal with 37 seconds remaining in the game, after his team had pulled goaltender Gilles Gratton, lifted the Rangers into the tie with the Rockies.

Esposito's shot from close range capped a three-goal burst by New York in the final period as the Rangers batled back from a 3-0 deficit to tie the game at 3-3 and again at 4-4 after the Rockies' final score.

The Rockies got off to a fast start with three first-period goals, two by Simon Nolet and the other by Paul Gardner. It was Gardner's sixth goal in three games.

New York began to battle back in the second period when Don Murdoch scored his 29th goal of the year at 4:42.

The Rangers tied the game in the third period on a goal by Ron Greschner and Murdoch's second of the night.

Barpy Dean put the Rockies back in front at 16:19, setting the stage for Esposito's effort.

New Bastion Play

Having scored a success with this season's experiment in producing a Canadian play — Creeps, by David Freeman — Bastion Theatre's Edwin Stephenson has announced that the world premiere of a new Canadian play by Victoria-based writer Ron Chudley will be part of the 1977-78 main stage season.

The play tells the story of Wolfe and Montcalm and is entitled After Abraham. Chudley has written a number of plays including some for children and last season wrote the entire repertoire for Theatre Calgary's touring company. He also has over 60 produced radio, film and television scripts to his credit.

Top Dancer Judge at Festival

For those several hundreds of people who are probably contemplating entering the 1977 Greater Victoria Music Festival, the deadline is close. Entries must be mailed or delivered no later than next Saturday, Jan. 15.

On Friday and Saturday, festival secretary Mrs. J. F. K. English and assistants will be on duty all day at Nelson's Music Centre, 1315 Government, to accept and record entries.

The festival board has achieved a scoop in the dance category with the appointment as ballet and dance adjudicator of Mrs. Soonee Lee.

A former principal of the Singapore Ballet Academy and member of the Arts Council of Singapore, Mrs. Lee has recently been appointed to head the new ballet program at Vancouver's Community Music School.

Trained at the Legat School, the Royal Ballet School in London, England, and the State Ballet Academy of East Berlin, Mrs. Lee has studied with outstanding Russian teachers such as Olga Preolragenska, Tatjana Gsosky and Nina Verubuva.

She was a member of the Berliner Ballet Company and for many years, principal dancer of the Singapore Ballet. She has danced extensively in Europe and South East Asia and has trained many dancers who are now dancing in various opera houses and ballet companies in Australia, England, Europe and the United States. In 1969 she was the recipient of a French government grant to study teaching methods in ballet and choreography at the Paris Opera.

In 1976 Victoria achieved the status of having the biggest festival in the province in point of view of entries, topping for the first time the long-established Vancouver Kiwanis Festival. Expansion was particularly noticeable last year in dance, piano, strings and vocal sections.

LEE
. . . from Singapore

Nearly all adjudicators for the 1977 festival, which will take place April 25 to May 7, are Canadian. Among them, as one of the piano adjudicators, is widely known and distinguished Vancouver teacher Phylis Schuldt.

Those contemplating entry in specific areas of the festival — piano, vocal, strings, brass, woodwinds and guitar — are reminded that this year the Provincial Finals are to be held in Victoria in May, giving Victoria winners in those categories the advantage of competing on their home ground for the first time.

The Aura Of an Artist

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Personality is something we tend to think of as being the property of certain fortunate people — the Carol Burnetts and Mary Tyler Moores, the Dick Van Dykes and Allan Aldas, for example.

But personality plays an important part in everybody's life and is not even entirely confined to the human race. For people, however, personality is the first and often most important avenue of communication.

Zara Nelsova, the Canadian-born internationally acclaimed cellist, illustrates this both in her person and her viewpoint. The tall, blonde and handsome daughter of Russian parentage is in Victoria at the moment conducting workshops and giving master classes for about 150 young cellists at Victoria Conservatory of Music.

On Friday evening she joined Robin Wood in a performance of the Caesar Franck Cello Sonata — a glowing performance filled end to end with superb musical detail and brilliant execution in a balanced partnership.

At the moment of meeting Nelsova one is instantly aware of her warmth and sincerity; of being in the presence, but not overpowered by, a dynamic aura.
ic aura.

She is an alert listener and lively conversationalist, punctuating her talk with occasional movements of her big, beautiful, broad-finger-tipped hands.

Personality becomes a subject of her talk. A frequent soloist with many of the world's great orchestras, Nelsova says that when she is introduced at the first rehearsal with an orchestra, she takes a few minutes to talk with some of the players, relax, establish a friendly feeling.

"I am aware of the many personalities of the conductor and the musicians ... we have to feel that we know each other," she says. "There has to be a harmony among us if we are to make music together."

Similarly, when a student plays for her for the first time she pays less attention to the playing than to the personality. Getting to know the students is terribly important. "When you have established that communication you can listen to their music with so much more insight," she says.

That Nelsova has a particularly keen insight into people, their personality hang-ups and quirks, an insight well leavened with humor, is revealed in an anecdote she tells about the famous conductor, Leon Furtwangler.

In London, after a performance, he offered to drive her to her home, and in the car, with great warmth took her hand firmly in his, expressing ardent admiration. ("He was quite a ladies' man by reputation," she says.)

.He then suggested that he would like her to cook a supper for him. "I was horrified. I hadn't that much confidence in my cooking — I wanted to play for him, not cook for him, so I suggested that we could have supper at a very good restaurant I knew about and to emphasize its quality I added: Cripps goes there you know.

"He dropped my hand as though it had suddenly turned to ice, Sir Stafford Cripps (former British cabinet minister) I said. He took back my hand and his voice warmed again. I thought you meant Josef Krips (Austrian conductor) he told me."

The Music Makers:

REISER . . . featured artist

A Fast Learner

Twenty-four-year-old Allen Reiser didn't begin formal music study until the rather advanced age of 12; most music educators recommend much earlier starts.

But Calgary-born Reiser, from his formative period of piano study in that city with Mary Fenwick, has made a steady and spectacular growth in the 12 years that have elapsed.

In 1970 he attended the Banff School of Fine Arts and studied with Boris Roubakine, and in 1972, on a scholarship, he worked in Salzburg, Austria, with Professor Neumüller. In that same year he came to Victoria and began four years of study with Robin Wood at the Victoria Conservatory of Music.

During that time he has twice won the City Medallion piano championship competition in the Victoria Music Festival (1972 and 1973), twice represented Victoria in, and won, the Provincial Finals, going on to the National in Toronto where he placed second both times.

He received a gold medal in his ARCT examination in 1973, was a finalist in the prestigious Concours de Quebec competition in 1974, and has altogether collected four silver medals from the Royal Conservatory of Toronto and Western Board of Alberta.

Now an experienced recitalist with a diversified repertoire, he will be the featured artist at the next "Theme and Variations" concert, Thursday at 8 p.m. at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, 1040 Moss. His program will be devoted to the piano music of the present century.

CBC broadcasts and television appearances have added to his experience as a performer and now, while still studying with Wood and teaching at the Conservatory, he commutes to Seattle intermittently for sessions with Bela Siki at the University of Washington. In the future he plans further study in Europe

An omniverous reader, he keeps in fine physical shape with two favorite hobbies — cycling and swimming

AT THE GALLERIES

A selection of recent work featuring 15 watercolor sketches of the Greek Islands by Herbert Siebner, among other items, under the general title New Imprint, starts the New Year off at The Maples Gallery, West Saanich and Keating Cross Roads.

Also showing are unframed prints by Rob Wilson, Star Wyatt and Ranjan Sen; graphics by Vancouver-based artist Pnina Granirer and new paintings by local artist Mimi Jones. The show opens Saturday, Jan. 15 and continues through Feb. 6.

Public showings are resumed by Karibu's Upper Gallery, at 565 Johnson, with the presentation of Light and Texture, a photographic odyssey by Victoria Camera Club members Rodger Garbutt, Dorothp Haegert and Michael McNall.

This exhibition brings together scenes from many parts of Canada and Europe, selected by the artists to emphasize sixth sense in te photographic portrayal of life. The photographs will be on view Jan. 15-26, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays.

There will be half-hour slide showings of McNall's prize-winning Arctic scenes Friday, 7 p.. to 9 p.m. and Sunday, Jan. 16, 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. These are open to the public.

Now on view at Open Space, 510 Fort, is an exhibition of works by the Malaspina Printmakers' Society. This will continue through Jan. 15.

A regional non-profit collective formed in 1975, the Malaspina Printmakers held a similar exhibition at Open Space last year. Twenty-six pieces were selected by a jury out of more than 100 entries for the exhibition which began in Vancouver's Centennial Museum and is now touring the province. The exhibition was made possible by grants from the B.C. Cultural Fund and National Museums Corporation.

PLAY STIRS U.K. WOMAN

LONDON — No one would ever think of a play about the situation of women as any place to go for a laugh. But audiences at the Hampstead Theatre Club here — half blue jeans and afghan coats, half blue hair and furs from the affluent suburbs farther out — have been laughing and crying a good deal at a play called Dusa, Fish, Stas and Vi by Pam Gems.

Apart from being funny enough to be bearable, it is clear this play has hit some vital nerve. If it turns out to be important it could be in the same sort of way that John Osborne's "Look Back in Anger" was important: because it so perfectly illuminates the mood of a moment.

"A Look Back" was recently revived on television in Britain, and much of it still struck home; everyone was incredulous, though, at the incessant amount of ironing done by the heroine. Liberation, not to mention the drip-dry shirt, made it seem a curiously dated form of torture. The play in Hampstead, however, is the updated agony.

Four women share a flat, and there is the usual painting of toenails and cracking of bawdy jokes of the life-with-its-hair-down female comedy. But their female solidarity is only a desperate gaiety in the face of disaster.

The play hits exactly the mood of cynical awareness that's beginning to hit women in Britain now.

There have been laws on equal opportunity and equal pay that have not in practice brought much of either; earlier reforms on divorce laws have left more and more women coping alone; and no one, of course, has figured out a way of freeing women from the basic vulnerability of having— or even wanting — children. For the strongest underlying theme of this play is that bearing children is what really fixes them: Vi has had a (rather unconvincing) seven months' abortion, Dusa really cares about nothing else; the tragic Fish dies with the words "I wanted so much to sit under a tree with my children and there doesn't seem to be any place for that and I feel cheated."

The swing in feminism, like the swings in everything else, are less extreme in Britain than they are, say, in the United States; our "liberation" has been less purposeful and less complete, and the backlash to be seen in America has scarcely started, except perhaps in a massive anti-abortion movement.

THE LESS AMBITIOUS half of the social-climbing Hopcrofts (Margaret Martin) is harassed and embarrassed in her encounter with the upper-class Ronald Brewster-Wright (John Swindells) in Bastion Theatre's comedy production, Absurd Person Singular. Final performance of the entertaining show is tonight at McPherson Playhouse, curtain at 8.

Gati Keeps on Move

Maestro Laszlo Gati has been executing a regular Santa Claus passage north and south through the skies during the 12 days of Christmas.

It began on Dec. 28 when he took off for Mexico City to rehearse the National Symphony Orchestra of Mexico for six concerts he will conduct this month.

He spent New Year's Eve with the Canadian Ambassador and his family, flew back home for rehearsals Wednesday and Thursday with the Victoria Symphony, a Friday concert in Duncan and the weekend pair at the Royal, and will return to Mexico City Jan. 12 until the end of the month.

Gati's concerts open the Spring 1977 series of Mexican National Symphony concerts which take place in the magnificent Theatre of Fine Arts. He will be conducting works by Kodaly, Bartok, Sibelius, Mozart, Richard Strauss, Donizetti, Rossini and Vaughan Williams.

Soloist at the second pair of Mexican concerts is Canadian soprano Anna Chornodolska, who was soloist with the Victoria Symphony last season.

Trudi Conrad Gives Recital

First concert in 1977 sponsored by the Victoria Musical Art Society will feature former Victorian Trudi Conrad, a young violinist of exceptional ability who is currently in her second year of study with the renowned master, Sandor Vegh, at the Mozaretum Academy in Salzburg.

The concert takes place Jan. 16 at McPherson Playhouse at 2:30 p.m.

Miss Conrad will be partnered at the piano by Robin Wood and the program will consist of the Sonata in D "Le Tombeau" by Jean Marie Le-Clair, Brahms' Sonata in G Major, Op. 78, Saint Saens' Havanaise Op. 83, and for unaccompanied violin, the Bach Sonata 11 in A minor.

Red Tape Snarls Alta. Woman In Bid to Adopt Retarded Boy

EDMONTON (CP) — An Alberta woman who wants to adopt a mentally retarded Indian orphan is facing a fight with the provincial government as well as with immigration officials to get the boy into Canada.

Maura Good of Sexsmith, Alta., 300 miles northwest of here, was awarded permanent guardianship of 14-year-old Joe Vaz by the high court of India last September.

However, Canadian immigration officials in Bombay turned down two requests for an immigration visa.

Mrs. Good's husband, Bill, a school principal, said the applications were refused because "Joe was diagnosed as being mentally retarded and therefore did not qualify for a visa."

However, immigration officials in Ottawa said Mrs. Good's requests were refused because the Alberta government will not provide the required approval.

The only reason a visa has not been granted for the boy is because the Alberta government will not agree "to provide institutional care that may be required now or in the future," said a federal immigration department spokesman.

"Granted, there is a lot of red tape involved, but we've been prepared all along to let him in," the spokesman said.

He said the provincial government had given Mrs. Good provisional approval to adopt the boy but later withdrew it when he was diagnosed as retarded.

Alberta was asked for permission after immigration officials sought to let Joe in under special minister's permit because he is 14. The immigration law generally restricts adoptions in such cases to children 13 years of age or younger.

Good said he is surprised by the the immigration department "passing the buck" to the Alberta government.

"The whole thing is getting pathetic," he said.

"We have had no problem from the Alberta government, except from the social services side which sent us a letter. We were told the Alberta Child Welfare cannot support our plan to adopt Joe as there is a danger he could become public liability."

Good said he and his wife were never told Alberta government permission was needed to bring the boy into the province, and added the provincial government has nothing to do with the case because it had not declared Joe mentally retarded.

"Immigration officials in Bombay did this. It is a decision I bitterly contest. If it had not been for this decision Joe would have been with us already."

According to a medical examination report, Joe has a low intelligence quotient and cannot speak clearly. The report also said he is eager to learn at his own pace and needs love to reach his full potential.

"It is on the basis of this report that Joe was declared mentally retarded. It is something I cannot understand," Good said.

He said he now plans to approach a lawyer to help in his wife's fight to give Joe a home.

A CRUCIAL PAWN ENDING
(By the late Paul Keres, U.S.S.R.)

It is well known that minor mistakes can be tolerated in the opening or in the middlegame, because they can usually be corrected later by good play. But in the endgame, a mistake seldom can be corrected, especially in pawn-endings. A good illustration is the following position from the Westerinen-Mjagmarsuren game, played at the Tallinn International tournament, 1971.

WHITE: Westerinen: King on KR5, pawns on QN3, QN2 and KN5 (four pieces).

BLACK: King on K2, pawns on QR3, QN4, and KB4 (four pieces).

The position looks very favorable for White. He will be able to exchange pawns on the King's side and thereafter run his King to the Queen's side pawns earlier than his opponent. But pawn endings often are full of fine points, and this is the case here.

Mjagmarsuren, of Mongolia, played here 48 . . . K-B2? which should lead to loss of the game. Correct was 48 . . . P-N5!; 49. PN6 (or 49. K-R6, P-B5;) 49 . . . P-B5!!; 50. K-N4, K-B6; 51. KxP, KxP.

Westerinen, of Finland, missed the win with 49. P-N4, K-N2; (49 . . . K-N1; 50. P-N6, K-N2; 51. K-N5, etc.) 50. P-N3!, K-R2; (Black is in a Zugzwang position.) 51. P-N6ch, K-N2; 52. K-N5, P-B5; 53. KxP, KxP; 54. K-K5 and it is easy to see that White will win.

But Westerinen played 49 . . . P-Nch?, K-N2; 50. KN5, P-B5; 51. KxP, KxP; 52. K-K5. Now followed the surprise 52 . . . P-N5!; and Westerinen, after long thought, settled for a draw. Why? Because 53. K-Q5, K-B4; 54. K-B5, K-K5; 55. KxP, K-Q6; 56. K-R5, K-B7; 57. P-N4, K-N6!; would lead to a Zugzwang position for White.

Very nice and impressive! The moral: Be especially careful in seemingly easy endings. Sometimes there are vital points that can be overlooked at first sight.

The solution to the problem above is: 1. N-N3, B-K5ch; 2. QxB mate; or 1 . . . B-B5ch; 2. RxB mate; or 1 . . . BxQ; 2. N-B5 mate; or 1 . . . RxN; 2. QxR mate; etc.

Dissident Pledge Smuggled Out

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Ukrainian dissident group has smuggled to the West a declaration of principles pledged both to human rights and to possible independence from the Soviet Union.

The declaration was adopted by Pyotr Grigerenko, a Second World War Soviet general, and nine other dissidents at a meeting in Kiev in November in the apartment of Mykola Rudenko, an author.

A Ukrainian emigre writer, who provided a reporter with what was said to be a translated version of the declaration, said the group has been harassed by Soviet secret police who searched their homes for the declaration and other documents considered provocative by authorities.

The group in Kiev parallels another union of dissidents in Moscow who were the targets of raids earlier this week. Both groups were formed to monitor Soviet compliance with the human rights provisions of the 1975 Helsinki accord on European security and co-operation.

The dissident group, in its declaration, says it intends to collect written complaints about human rights violations in the Ukraine and bring them to the attention of governments that subscribe to the Helsinki agreement. There is to be a review conference next summer in Belgrade, Yugoslavia.

"In its activity the group is guided not by political motives but by humanitarian and legal considerations," the declaration said.

"Peace among nations cannot be guaranteed without free contact between people and a free exchange of information and ideas."

Grigerenko, the best-known of the dissidents, is 69 and a former major-general and lecturer at a Soviet military academy. He was confined to a psychiatric ward for five years.

Bohdan Yasen, the Ukrainian writer who supplied a copy of the declaration, said eight of the 10 dissidents have spent a total of 63 years in concentration camps and psychiatric institutions.

PARAPLEGIC RAPED

VANCOUVER (CP) — A 16-year-old suspect was in custody Friday after a 26-year-old paraplegic woman was raped and robbed in her East End apartment.

Police said the woman was asleep when her attacker entered her room, threatened to produce a gun, raped her and stole $125.

Auto Production Up 28% in U.S.

DETROIT (Reuter)— Company figures show the three major U.S. automakers produced more than 8.5 million cars in 1976, a gain of 28 per cent over 1975.

Total auto production by General Motors Corp., Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp. in 1976 was 8,524,569 units, up from 6,651,293 in recession-ridden 1975.

Chrysler, which posted a gain of 35.6 per cent, recorded the largest increase, followed by General Motors at 32.9 per cent. Ford, which suffered a month-long strike in September, trailed with 13.6 per cent.

The figures are for production only, and include cars added to inventory. Sales figures are due to be released later this week, and most analysts expect they will show a strong surge for the last 10 days of 1976.

The three auto-makers all recorded sharp rises in December compared with production levels of a year ago. Ford produced 201,123 cars in December, up from 134,991 in December, 1975; Chrysler produced 110,568 cars last month, up from 91,514; and GM turned out 405,437 cars, up from 333,573.

QUAKE PREDICTED WEEK IN ADVANCE

MENLO PARK, Calif. (AP) — Researchers at the U.S. Geological Survey centre here say they predicted a week in advance a mild earthquake that struck 10 miles south of San Francisco.

The quake Thursday was centred near the agricultural community of Hollister and measured 3.2 on the Richter scale of ground motion. The research team at the Geological Survey's Western Region headquarters said it came close to the magnitude they had predicted.

Geophysicists Malcolm Johnston, one of the leaders of the Geological Survey team, called the prediction "significant" and an indication that quake forecasting techniques are improving.

The research team said that on Dec. 30, automated instruments made three simultaneous observations that the ground in the earthquake-volatile region south of Hollister was tilting minutely.

As a result, a six-man team of earth scientists predicted that an earthquake with a magnitude of 3.5, or two-tenths of a point more or less, would strike within 9.3 miles of the Howard Harris ranch south of Hollister.

The date, the forecast said, would be between Jan. 1 and Jan. 30.

At 1:28 a.m. Thursday, the earth shook briefly 6.2 miles south of the Harris ranch.

The scientists had said there had been only a 50-percent probability that they would be right. They conceded that the Hollister area is so seismically active that there was a 30-percent chance of an earthquake happening at any time within their prediction boundary.

The Richter scale is a measurement of ground motion as recorded on a seismograph. Every increase of one number means a tenfold increase in magnitude. An earthquake of 3.5 on the scale can cause slight damage in the local area. At the other end of the scale, it has been estimated that the San Francisco earthquake of 1906 would have registered 8.25.

MP Urges Extra Food Controls

By DAN POTTIER
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Food processing and distributing firms should be added to the list of companies compelled to pre-notify the Anti-Inflation Board (AIB) of price increases, according to Liberal MP Herb Gray.

In a letter to AIB Chairman Jean-Luc Pepin made public Friday, Gray urges this extra control measure in light of warnings that increases in the price of food can be expected in 1977 following the downward trend of last year.

The former cabinet minister said he rejected the AIB argument that it wasn't practical to put the food firms on the pre-notification list because their prices were subject to rapid change.

Price changes prevailed for some time, he suggested, adding that companies would have ample time to meet the 30-day notice period. Some companies had been finding the time to "informally" check with the AIB in advance of price hikes.

At present, the AIB requires 274 firms to give 30 days notice of price hikes which would increase the domestic sales revenue of a product by more than two per cent in any calendar year.

Gray said he was prompted to make his suggestion in light of recent hikes in the price of bread, chocolate bars and coffee.

He noted that much of the progress so far in the slowing of the rate of increase in the cost of living had been in the food prices area.

Food prices are not controlled at the farm gate, but processing and distributing companies are subject to the over-all AIB profit controls.

Gray said that at present there was "no formal price justification requirement" for such companies and no requirement for the AIB to make formal rulings on food price increases.

The AIB reported Dec. 21 that complaints to the board about food prices had declined sharply — they had accounted for only 44 of the 671 complaints recorded by the board in the two weeks ended Dec. 6.

Retail food prices in December were lower than a year ago, according to the board.

Hanging More Humane Than Lockup: Lawyer

TORONTO (CP) — A Toronto lawyer says that six of 11 convicted killers who had their death sentences commuted last year are kept locked in small cells for up to 23 hours a day in a "super-maximum" wing at Millhaven penitentiary near Kingston, Ont.

"They're being treated like animals," said Earl Glasner, who represents Rene Vaillancourt, sentenced to be hanged for killing a Metropolitan Toronto policeman.

Glasner said in an interview that he would not be surprised if one of the prisoners asked to be hanged. "It might be more humane."

Millhaven director John Dowcett said the six convicted killers are among 18 prisoners confined in the special handling unit.

In answer to Glasner's allegations, he said:

"If I was not satisfied with the situation in that area, then I would have it changed. There are some prisoners who have to be segregated from others at all times."

A spokesman for the penitentiary services division of the solicitor-general's department in Ottawa said in an interview: "They (the killers) could be there for 15 days or 15 years . . . it all depends on their attitude . . . their behaviour."

Glasner said the tight security in the Millhaven unit is a way the federal government has of appeasing jail guards who threatened to go on strike after capital punishment was abolished.

Pub Price Up In Manitoba

WINNIPEG (CP) — Beverage rooms and retail beer sales outlets in Manitoba raised their prices this week for bottled beer and for one-ounce shots of liquor.

The price of a bottle of beer rose to 75 cents from 70 cents, and for lowball — lower alcohol content — beer, the price increased to 70 cents a bottle from 65.

For a single-ounce shot of liquor served in a beverage room, the price was raised to 95 cents from 90.

The price of a dozen bottles of beer at vendor outlets and liquor stores rose to $4.15 from $4.

Native Inmates Take to Carving

AGASSIZ, B.C. (CP) — In a simple workshop at the medium-security Agassiz Mountain Prison near this Fraser Valley community, native Indian prisoners are turning slabs of wood into valuable carvings and a future career.

Prison officials set up the Native Extraordinary Line of Furniture (NELOF) co-operative in 1974, but for several months it looked as though the workshop, financed by the federal department of Indian affairs and northern development, would fail for lack of interest.

Then, one day, Sonny, a master-carver, wandered in to look around.

"I said: 'This is nothing but a hobby shop. Listen, you guys, look what we got here. There are at least 15 white men over there who'd really make something of this shop and look at us, just fooling around, not getting anywhere.'"

The response: "Those guys got off their biscuits," said Sonny.

With Sonny providing carving advice and other members providing administrative help, NELOF got going. Between April and September, the prisoner carvers erased a $31,000 debt.

Six apprentices, including a white man, have joined the three master carvers to bring the project's complement to nine.

Most of the pieces are commissioned by customers who hear of the shop by word of mouth. A large carved dresser sells for $1,000, an elaborate wall hanging for $350.

Many of the NELOF members hope to use their new skills to earn a living on the outside.

"Why take welfare when this way we can show guys how to make it on their own?" said one carver.

Family prepares for six-year odyssey by sail

FORT ERIE, Ont. — To get away from it all Peter and Mae Hybltoft are taking their two children around the world in a sailboat.

While their 35-foot cutter is being built in St. Catharines, Ont., they are learning the techniques of sailing.

The venture is costing them $40,000 for the boat and the journey will take six years.

They expect to leave in August and their two teenagers will take a five-year Ontario ministry of education correspondence course.

Hyltoft is taking a power squadron course on practical piloting and seamanship and another on celestial navigation. He also is learning how to use a sextant to find his position by the stars.

Mrs. Hyltoft is collecting recipes and tips on food preservation. She will take dried fruits and vegetables, canned goods and fresh eggs on the voyage.

To keep the cans from rusting in the salt air, the labels must be removed and the cans dipped in varnish, she said. Fresh eggs must be greased with vaseline to keep the air from penetrating the shell.

The couple have learned that if they run out of fresh water they can collect rain water in the sails. They also can drop an empty corked bottle attached to a string over the side. With the sun's heat on the top and the cold water underneath, condensation will create about four ounces of distilled water within hours.

The family plan to spend most of their first year in the Caribbean and northern South America. They say they hope to spend their second winter in Hawaii.

From Hawaii they intend to go to Vancouver then back to Hawaii for another winter. From there they will sail to Japan, Hong Kong, the Philippines, New Guinea and Fiji before reaching New Zealand and Australia at the end of the fourth year.

From there, they will go to Singapore, Burma and across the Bay of Bengal to Ceylon and India. Then they will sail the Arabian Sea to Saudi Arabia, through the Suez Canal and along the north coast of the Mediterranean, which will mark the end of the fifth year.

Peter and Mae Hyltoft practise rope-splicing

Then they will travel through the Strait of Gibraltar, north to France and on to Denmark.

Following Denmark, they will visit the United Kingdom then cross the Atlantic. Before reaching Canada they will go to the Azores, then Bermuda, and north to New York.

They will sail to Nova Scotia and come back to Fort Erie via the St. Lawrence Seaway.

Their boat, to be named Lucky Lady, will be almost identical to the J. E. Bernier II, which left Montreal June 30 to travel the Northwest Passage.

Lucky Lady will have a steel hull and a 40-foot mast The 32-horsepower diesel engine will have a top speed of seven knots.

The boat will carry 6,000 pounds of ballast, 200 gallons of diesel fuel and 200 gallons of fresh water. Under full sail she will have 800 feet of canvas.

The galley will have a three-burner propane stove which cost $500 and a refrigerator.

The Hyltofts didn't expect the high cost of rigging Lucky Lady. The main sail cost $700 and the Genoa jib will cost $830. The cost of two foresails and the storm sails has not been estimated yet.

The Hyltofts have sold almost all their possessions to prepare for the voyage and Mrs. Hyltoft says she can hardly wait for her first dinner of fresh salt-water fish.

Book untangles U.K. surnames

LONDON — A man who spells his name Myerscough pronounces it Maskew. Another says he's called Chumley though his business cards read Cholmondeley. The Beauchamp family like to be referred to as Beecham, and the Cockburns insist it should be spoken Coburn.

Many a North American visitor to Britain has stumbled into the orthographical trap of aristocratic British surnames (and some not so blue-blooded). After all, how could a foreigner guess that Auchinleck can be pronounced Affleck?

Patrick Montague-Smith, editor of Debrett's Peerage, and a new book of international etiquette, Debrett's Correct Form, has lost count of the times he has gently corrected inquirers who were asking, for example, about the Colquhoun family, not realizing it's pronounced Cahoon.

So to spare the blushes of those who do not know, the Duke of Buccleuch refers to his title as Bu-Cloo, and others, he has included a section in correct form on correct pronunciation.

"The trouble is there's no rule for pronouncing old names and titles," Montague-Smith said, "especially if they derive from old Scottish or Welsh."

Halfway to the stars on a beloved antique

Cable cars devour San Francisco city funds

SAN FRANCISCO — Bells clang, wheels rumble, the cable car careens around a corner, tilts over the top of a hill and down the other side. Passengers shriek, the driver prays and San Francisco's most archaic, expensive and dangerous form of transportation is on its way.

There have been cable cars here for more than a century, and while almost every other city in the world abolished such service about 60 years ago, the ancient creatures still cling to the hills of San Francisco.

They are one of the noisiest — but most appealing — peculiarities of the city. Tourists love them and put in hours waiting for them. San Franciscans, while downright hostile, even mutinous, toward every other form of public transportation, positively dote on their cable cars.

It is a love affair that threatens to bankrupt the city. The financially troubled Muni Railway, as the public transportation system is called, spends less than half a million dollars a year on its 535 buses, but it spends $5.1 million a year on its 39 cable cars. Buses cost about $17 an hour to operate; cable cars cost twice that.

Moreover, the city's financial squeeze is so severe that employees who resign or retire from the transportation system are not being replaced. There are about 40 men to maintain and operate the cable cars now, and because these are antique, handmade machines the five mechanics who remain on the payroll must make as well as install all the replacement parts they need.

Clinging to a tradition

And the problems are not limited to those facing the accountants and mechanics. The marine-and-gold cable cars are so infuriatingly unreliable that a 25-cent ride on one can be a flirtation with disaster.

Just recently, people were injured in one accident, and passengers occasionally fall out of the open cars because of carelessness or breakdown of the cars.

So frequent are cable car accidents, in fact, that while .014 cents of every 25-cent bus fare is set aside for damage claims, 5.3 cents of every quarter collected on the cable cars is earmarked for that purpose.

Despite such problems, the cable car does not seem to be in danger of extinction. It has been declared a national landmark, and the San Francisco city charter provides that service cannot be halted unless the stop is approved in a city referendum.

"The cable cars were here when this town was really magic," said Herb Caen, the columnist of The San Francisco Chronicle," and we look at them now with adoring eyes. They can do no wrong. They're like old people tottering around on the hills costing us a fortune, but without them we'd be lost."

Curtis Green, who, as manager of the city's troubled transportation system, has to deprive Peter to pay Paul, says: "No expense for cable cars is too extraordinary."

"San Francisco is a great tourist centre, and the No. 1 attraction we have is the cable car. You can bet your bottom dollar they bring in more then their weight in gold and tourist revenue. The future of the cable is as sure as the future of San Francisco."

But the future of the cars' maintenance seems less than sure.

"Working the cable cars has become a lost art," said 59-year-old Stanley Northrup, like his father a mechanic on the line. "They're just not breaking in any new men, and I don't know what's going to happen around here when we're all gone.

"Everything is done by hand," he added as he looked around the dusty 70-year-old brick cable barn near the top of Nob Hill. "We can't just go to the shop and pick up a bolt or a plate. We have to make it."

His boss, Earl Chatterton, says new men need to be trained by the "old-timers" for three or four years before he can "trust them alone on the job."

"They've got to know how to shape and weld," he said. "They've got to be builders and blacksmiths as much as mechanics, and as far as I know that kind of work disappeared on the outside a long time ago. This isn't a factory. Everything here's an antique."

Wear and tear on the system has increased as the number of passengers has risen to 12 million a year, only 60 per cent of them tourists. In the old days the grips, or braking devices, were repaired only once or twice a year. Now they go into the shop every three to eight days.

There are tens of thousands of feet of cable on the pulley lines under the street. In 1974 it cost 63 cents a foot to replace them; now it costs $1.14. The cables used to be replaced once a year at the most, according to Kevitt Day, manager of the cable barn. "Now," he said, "they go every 60 to 100 days, and there are only four men on the job who even know how to do it."

Despite all these internal worries, most tourists and even San Franciscans seem oblivious to anything but the charm of the cable cars.

Indonesia tough on drug dealers

JAKARTA — The thousands of young foreigners who flock to Bali every year seem unaware of tough new Indonesian narcotics laws that might lead to years in jail or even death.

Foreign diplomats are worried that most tourists do not seem to realize Indonesian authorities are determined to enforce the new laws, and that their embassies can do little to help offenders.

A young Australian musician has received six years' imprisonment for illegal possession of hashish. A young woman was jailed for nine weeks, heavily fined and sent back to Australia.

Two death sentences — one for drug trafficking and the other for economic subversion — may be imposed on Australian pilot Donald Tate, 45, who now is on trial in Denpaser, Bali.

Tate pleaded not guilty to charges of attempting to smuggle almost two-thirds of a ton of marijuana, 56 paintings and 293 pieces of jewelry hidden in the wings of his light aircraft.

Police beats on sale

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — You can buy a police beat in San Francisco. It's legal. And it's a city tradition.

The people who buy the beats — some of which have been in existence longer than the police department — are quasi-police.

They pay for the rights to provide private-patrol service to merchants and residents.

The beat system stems from the 1850s, when San Francisco was virtually a tent city because of numerous fires, and businessmen and residents hired their own police to protect them.

Beat owners and assistants must take a special course at the police academy, and are sworn in as peace officers.

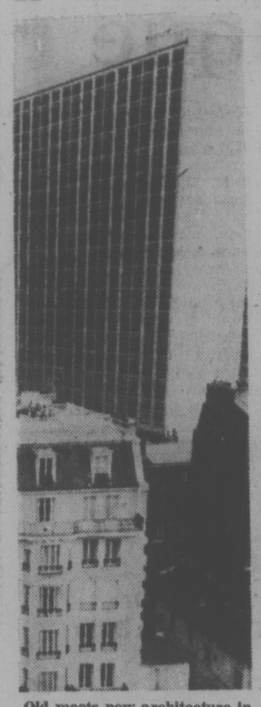
Paris has new 'in' neighborhood

Artists and bureaucrats hob-nob



Old meets new architecture in the 15th District, latest 'in-spot' for Parisians to live.

PARIS — It wasn't quite planned and nobody seems to know exactly when it happened, but it did: Another district of Paris has become an "in" place to live.

The capital's 15th Arrondissement — a district sprawling out from the Left Bank of the Seine with its old gray buildings mostly unscrubbed and its new angular towers mostly unloved — is approaching social classfiication as a chic area, where to live is to have "grand" standing and more than a hint of snobisme.

MANY RESIDENTS, newcomers and old-timers, wince at the architectural jumble the district has become. But they insist proudly, in conversations in their offices and in cafes along Rue de Vaugirard, that despite its failings and the problems created by the transformation of the district from working class to upper-middle class, that the 15th is the place to be.

"It is what I like to think of as the district of the new Frenchman," said a 36-year-old politician in a pin-striped suit whose career is tied to that of President Valery Giscard d'Estaing.

"The 15th is the newest and will be the biggest bourgeois area of Paris," said a proud city official who has lived in the area for 33 years.

SUCH REMARKS are common in the district, despite the fact that the 15th has no old renowned monuments, little grass, not a blush of nightlife and only a smattering of identifiable public or private institutions. On the edges of the area are the controversial 56-storey Montparnasse Tower, which dominates the Pris skyline but is hidden from most points within the 15th, the American-inspired Paris Hilton and the Japanese Nikko Hotel.

Massive, Lego-like apartment complexes have a magnificent view of the luxurious 16th Arrondissement on the other side of the Seine, but give the people there shivers as they look back across the river to the 15th. Deeper inside the district are its few older, known structures: the Pasteur Institute and the Office of Found Objects.

the new physical and social shape of the district was born of accident and necessity as Paris has rearranged itself over the last dozen or so years. Industry, such as the Citroen car works, began to move out of the district and the developers, private and public, began to move in. The poor and middle-income workers lost their jobs in, for example, the horse-flesh abbatoir on the Rue des Morillons, which has been largely closed and is to become a park.

IN RECENT YEARS, despite their distaste for the new architecture, thousands of business executives and senior civil servants began to move in. The 15th has lost the fewest people in the exodus from Paris to the suburbs. Now the district has a population that appears to have stabilized at 230,000 — "a city as large as Bordeaux within Paris," a long-time resident said.

"With each one living in his own box," the director of a youth centre said, "there is a need for people to get out of their four walls, to have human contact." Many of the centre's clients, he said, are the wives of executives. They take lessons in activities like karate, modern guitar, basketweaving and how to survive when dumped out of a kayak. Their daughters take ballet lessons, or, in a public hall in the basement of the Montparnasse Tower, learn how to fence, using modern electronic equipment.

DEEP IN THE HEART of the district, behind high walls on the narrow Passage de Dantzig, a small artists' colony thrives in and around a funny building called la Ruche — "the Hive" — designed at the turn of the century by the men who created the Eiffel Tower.

In la Ruche and its courtyard are painters and sculptors, mostly unkowns, who pay about $100 a month for comfortable studios subsidized by the city. One of the artists, Francis Biras, said that, at the age of 45, he has now finally decided to quit his regular profession, architecture, to paint. Biras is a specialist in painting unmade beds.

Another specialist has a workshop in the courtyard. "He is an Italian," Biras said. "He only touches German bikes, possibly English, if you are a good friend. But he will never, not for anything, touch a Japanese motorcycle."

Red tape tangles average Czech

VIENNA — There is a saying in this neutral country bordering several East European states that anyone who has been on a trip can tell a lot. But in Eastern Europe, tourist can tell a story even before going, if they want to visit the West.

Here is what Josef Novak, the Mr. Average of Communist-ruled Czechoslovakia, has to do.

He first has to get a bank pledge for the foreign currency allowance, for which he had to apply at the beginning of the year. Eventually, he gets $11 a day, but not more than $220 total.

Then he has to get an endorsement for the trip from the place he works, which enables him to apply for a passport. He also has to prove by a document not older than six months that he has no erimінal conviction.

He can go to the West only once in three years. There are no such restrictions for family visits involving immediate relatives but for such visits, the total foreign currency allocation is only $10 in Europe, $20 overseas.

Czech passports are valid for five years and extensions are not complicated, but an exit permit is needed every time Novak wants to go abroad.

Tourism to other Communist countries is fairly easy, except for the Soviet Union and, in some cases, Poland, where letters of invitation are required.

In the first half of 1975, a total of 142,624 Czechs braved the red tape and made it to the West. The comparable figure for 1976 was 155,474. No records are available as to how many Czechs failed to get permission.

Mr. Clean tackles graffiti

PARIS (Reuter) — Mr. Clean is using eggplants to tidy up graffiti here and catch the "artistes."

Mr. Clean is Pierre Roger, who runs the city's Action Centre for Keeping Paris Clean.

The eggplants or "aubergines" are actually parking-meter policewomen, given the vegetable nickname because of their purple-maroon uniforms.

Roger already commands an all-male team that rips down offensive posters. He now wants a squad of aubergines to catch graffiti writers in the act and teach Parisians to be tidy.

Drawing a quick picture of his ideal "clean aubergine" he said, "I would like to have a team of about 20 chic women who look smart and really personify cleanliness."

The annual tidying-up budget of $480,000 goes for about 30 men equipped with walkie-talkie radios, blowtorch cleaning equipment and a fleet of 12 sparkling white vans decorated with red tulips.

"It really is like David battling against Goliath. We cannot be everywhere at the same time."

Remote but comfortable

Mist-draped district jewel of Thailand

CHIANG MAI, Thailand — This former capital of the kingdom is less than two hours by air from Bangkok. In pace, mood and setting, however, it's at least 2,000 moons away.

It's another world really — a misty, mountainous and mysterious land of hill tribes, rice paddies, superb artisans, opium, flowers and beautiful women even Thais find remote and enchanting.

Hub of the province of the same name, Chiang Mai is a convenient base — very well-equipped to handle visitors of every taste and pocketbook — from which to explore the fascinating countryside and, for the less adventurous, a very delightful city in which to spend a few days.

Near the Burmese border and 437 miles north of Bangkok, Chiang Mai can be reached from the capital by bus, train, airplane or in your own rented car over a good highway. Whatever your mode of transportation, the journey here serves as an introduction to this corner of the country.

Bangkok's bustle gives way first to peaceful rice fields and scattered small towns and villages. The crowds are gone, and so are their noisy ways. Concrete and glass are replaced by wood.

Traffic-clogged streets vanish and your eyes rest on long rows of palms and thick banana groves. "Klongs," those busy waterways around the capital, become fewer; you see rivers now.

Then, as you near Chiang Mai, mist-shrouded hills and mountains, including some of Thailand's tallest, poke their green faces all around patches of rich land where opium and rice are cultivated. Rivers become less visible, but there are countless streams and waterfalls.

And palms become pines. The climate here is mild, the air fresh as can be and the puffy clouds above, more often than not, heavy with rain.

From October through January the temperature averages a pleasant 70 degrees Fahrenheit; the rest of the year it hovers around 90, but since this town is 1,000 feet above sea level, its climate is considerably less humid than central Thailand.

Serpents guard temple steps

It is the recipient of frequent showers, but weather is seldom a problem.

This city will surprise you in several ways. It's the country's second largest, with a population of more than a million.

But it doesn't look or feel like a big place. You can call it a big country town. The pace here is definitely and delightfully rural.

Modern buildings — from excellent hotels to shops — abound, but so do temples and other structures that tell of Chiang Mai's long history.

Among the latter are remains of the city wall built by King Mengrai in the 13th Century when this was his capital.

Something here you're not likely to see in Bangkok: the colorfully garbed men, women and children of the nearby hill tribes. And there are quite a few in the vicinity —Lahu, Akha, Lisu, Yao, Karen and Meo.

Living nearest to town are the intelligent and handsome Meo who, due to their proximity to so-called civilization, are more willing to be photographed and even visited by tourists.

The local branch of the official Tourist Organization of Thailand — an office which you should visit to get up-to-date information before doing anything here — will help those interested in visiting a Meo village get in touch with one of the few guides who handle such treks.

Most visitors lack the two or three days required for such adventure and therefore limit their peek into the hill tribes' life and culture to something you should not miss: Doi Suthep, a temple formally known as Wat Phra Thad Doi Suthep.

Only 10 miles from town, it sits atop a 3,500-foot hill and thus commands a stunning view of Chiang Mai and its surroundings. Though very popular with locals and visitors alike, Doi Suthep is not just a tour-bus stop.

It's a wondrous mound of rain forests peopled by Meo tribe-families, the site of an interesting but not grandiose temple and a neighbor of the present king's winter palace.

You reach the gold temple that houses a bone said to be a relic of the Buddha by climbing the 300 steps of an extraordinary staircase bordered by two huge nine-headed serpents, done in colorful tiles.

Skin divers haul up bonanza of treasure

MOKPO, South Korea (AP) — Navy frogmen, every time they dive, scoop up dozens of priceless Chinese antique articles from the wreckage of an ancient "treasure ship" lying on a seabed 65 feet under water off the southwestern coast near this port city.

More than 600 vases, plates, vessels and other antique articles of China's Sung Dynasty era, dating back to the 10th through 13th centuries, have been cllected in what has been described as Operation Treasure Hunt.

A government cultural property research team in charge of the operation said it was confident of retrieving at least several hundred more such articles.

The team says preliminary studies by scholars and experts of antiquities rated the retrieved articles as highly valuable archeological specimens and priceless antiques.

"Curio collectors may pay as much as $500,000 apiece for some of the articles," said an archeologist.

It's Not Just the Elite Who Enjoy the State Ball

family

elizabeth forbes

This time last year, when it was certain there would be no State Ball to mark opening of the Legislature, I was amongst those who expressed disappointment at the decision and a hope that the ball would soon be reinstated.

Well, there is to be a State Ball in Government House this January. And again we are hearing the carping voices that said, last year, it was an extravagance we could readily do without.

The grumbling and the peevish shouts insist this type of event is a lot of nonsense. That it's a waste of money. That the economic picture is still far from bright.

Therefore, no one should smile, laugh or dance, even for one night.

The amazing thing is that those doing the grumping and groaning all seem to have one blind eye.

They see what they so glibly label as the unnecessary expense, yet fail to note that the State Ball assists shops and businesses of many kinds, not only in Victoria but in other parts of the province.

Also that it helps to stimulate the economy in the dull days that follow the Yuletide buying spree.

Here let me remind you that well over a thousand invitations are issued for a State Ball.

A relatively small number go to those on what is known as the protocol list. All the others go out (many through our elected Members of the Legislative Assembly) to recipients in villages, towns and cities in every constituency in British Columbia; also to heads of volunteer groups and other organizations and to individuals who have been active in different forms of service to the people of this province.

With the result that with every State Ball, many British Columbia citizens, of all ages, enter Government House for a first time on a festive occasion they will remember and talk about for years.

At this moment Government House secretary, Gar Dixon, expects at least 800 will attend the ball on January 14.

Let's look at that number for a moment. What does it mean to stores and businesses here and throughout the province?

For a starter, many of the feminine guests buy new gowns for the occasion; new footwear, jewelry and even outer wraps to complement those gowns.

They arrange for new hairdos, new perms, or at the very least, a facial and a shampoo and set. So you can be sure beauty salon appointment books are well filled days before the ball.

Dress suits will be rented by many of the male guests who often find it easier to be fitted in this way for an occasional festive eevent, than to own a tuxedo themselves.

On the other hand if guests plan to wear gowns and suits already in their wardrobes, dressmakers and tailors get into the act as hems and pant cuffs are lengthened or shortened and seams are eased out or taken in.

Dry cleaners, too, are called upon to freshen up many formals or dress suits.

Taxi companies benefit, for many guests prefer to arrive at Government House and to leave again by taxi on State Ball night, rather than risk having to park their cars blocks away — perhaps when it's raining.

Now let's look at those who attend the ball from out-of-town.

They come to Victoria by bus, train, ship or plane. So transportation companies get in on the party.

If they do bring their own cars, there is the extra gas and oil they need while here and on the road.

They stay in one or other of our hotels or inns. They eat in our restaurants. And, if they are from far-off places in the province, they manage to get into our stores for shopping, before they leave for home.

In Government House itself, extra help is called in for the occasion; extra food is needed, also extra liquor.

An orchestra must be hired. One that not only plays waltzes and foxtrots to please the older guests but also the drum-beating music that sets younger feet to stomping and shuffling.

And don't for a minute believe what the grumblers and groaners say — that it's provincial government money that pays the full shot for this special night in Government House.

Many of the extras guests will enjoy at the State Ball on January 14, will be provided personally by His Honor, Lieutenant-Governor Walter S. Owen.

I could continue enumerating benefits that accrue from a State Ball.

Benefits that I'm willing to wager would far out-reach the expense of this event, if they could be totalled into one over-all sum.

And although I am no mathematician, even I can see that money going to the various places I have listed travels on in an ever widening circle to benefit thousands of other British Columbians.

Therefore, let me say again, I'm happy there is to be a State Ball this year, on the night after opening of the current session of the Legislature, and a pox on the carpers, the grumblers and the groaners, with their (seemingly) blind eyes!

SCOOP CURBS HOOKEY

VANCOUVER (CP) — Operation SCOOP — School Children Out Of Place — is helping reduce the number of shoplifting incidents, burglaries and thefts in the east end of Vancouver.

In the first six weeks Constables Joe Dingman and Brian Metzgner picked up between 250 and 300 students and they say there has been a 20-per-cent decrease in daytime thefts since then.

The two police officers cruise the area in unmarked cars looking for children between seven and 15 years old.

"When we do pick them up we usually take them back to school and we're told the parents will be contacted," Constable Dingman said.

He said truants' favorite haunts are restaurants and pool halls.

"Kids are pretty smart and they know when we're around and when we're not around," he said. "But they rarely go to these places by themselves. There's usually three or four of them at least."

He said truancy is most common in Grades 8 and 9, or ages 13 and 14.

"There are two questions an adult should ask a child who comes to his door asking for pop bottles in the middle of the day," he said.

"They are: 'what are you collecting the bottles for?' and 'why aren't you in school?' "

"Usually, he's just casing the joint and, if no one is home, he may try get in."

Offenders Pay Their Debt

SURREY (CP) — Joe Doe gets home from his job and rushes to a rest home to teach the elderly residents how to play snooker.

Jill Doe bikes over to her neighborhood pool to teach toddlers how to swim before heading off to her job.

And both of them report regularly to their community service officer, a person who works directly with the courts and the probaion office, keeping adult offenders out of jail and in the community.

Community service officer Harry Whittell once was a policeman who sent criminals to jail. Then he became a prison officer who kept them there. Now he is paid to keep them out of jail.

The Surrey community service program is based on a similar plan in Britain which puts the offender into the community where he lives, spending up to 200 hours working for the community.

In the last year, Whittell has placed more than 100 offenders in jobs from cleaning up school grounds to teaching swimming and snooker-playing.

What is important is that the offender work off his debt within his community, Whittell said.

"The people there know him. He has to regain their respect."

"We'll assist him, the responsibility lies squarely on his shoulders. He has to show that he is not the type who should go to jail."

Minis Make Comeback —Over Pants, Boots

By BERNADINE MORRIS

NEW YORK — Bonwit Teller picked up the ball recently and ran with it. "The look that turned Paris upside down," it said in an ad that was run upside down. The ad depicted three versions, in striped, plaid or foulard-printed cotton, of what the store called "le mini-sack," priced from $21 to $32 each, and sketched on figures wearing tights, leg warmers and boots.

As the customers stepped off the elevators, that's what they saw: three mannequins dressed in the styles, similarly accoutered.

Mini-sack, with pants

Cindy Kweller, who plans to go to dental school, was one of the shoppers who stopped by the display.

"It's the sunglasses I'm interested in," she said when asked what she thought about minis. When pressed for her opinion about short skirts, she hedged. "I don't know if I care for them or not, but I love the sunglasses," she said.

Miss Kweller was wearing pants. So were most of the other women who paused to admire or even try on the "mini-sacks."

"I love minis," said Paulette Charles, a clerk, who tried on one of the hooded dresses over her pants. "I haven't had one in a while."

Dorotby Donaldson, a student, said she loved short skirts and managed to keep some, because "I never throw anything away." She also pulled her mini over pants.

"I like skirts either real long or short," said Jill Westcott, who goes to college in California and was home for the holidays. "I picked this dress because it's kind of pretty."

The consensus was that today's tunic might be worn as a minidress tomorrow, but the issue did not seem too troublesome.

"The price is really good and that's what counts," said Miss Charles.

"The styles are seling nicely and we're pleased," said Ninette Ricca, the Bonwit buyer. "It doesn't matter whether they're tunics or dresses — we're not dictating."

In a week's time, the store sold more than 200 dresses, she explained.

"Some of our branch stores — Short Hills and Hanhasset — did well with them," she whent on. "Some of the customers who were going south said they'd wear them over bathing suits while others told me they'd wear them here with tights, leg warmers, boots and heavy socks."

The most popular style was a tie between the hooded striped cotton dress at $22 and the plaid in cotton flannel at $27, Miss Ricci added.

"I thought the things were all reasonably priced but none of the women I talked to mentioned price," she said. "They seemed more interested in the way the dresses looked and how they would wear them."

$1 Million Goal

VANCOUVER (CP) — Although deaths due to heart attacks have been reduced, heart disease remains Canda's No. 1 killer and the British Columbia Heart Foundation is trying to make it No. 2. Heart foundation spokesman Kelly Young says the foundation's Heart Fund goal in 1977 will be $1,075,000 — the first $1-million goal in its history.

Archaic Adultery Laws Protested in Spain

MADRID (Reuter) — The police who had been watching the apartment for several weeks decided it was time to move in.

They went into the street entrance, moved cautiously up the stairs and opened the door with a pass key.

They made swiftly for the bedroom, flung open the door and discovered exactly what they had been looking for: a couple in bed; a man with another man's wife.

The pair were arrested, victims of Spain's archaic and discriminatory adultery law. They were sentenced to seven months in jail and ordered to pay the husband of the guilty woman 50,000 pesetas ($750) damages.

The husband had asked the police to discover proof that his estranged wife was committing adultery.

This they did when they found the couple in bed together. Under the law, actual proof of sexual relations is not required, just the fact that a married woman is found "lying with a male" other than her husband.

The penalty for adultery is a prison term of from six months to six years. The judge can also levy whatever fine he deems necessary for the aggrieved husband to wash away the stain to his honor.

A married man can be found guilty of adultery only if it is proven that he has kept another woman in his home or has set up a second household. He is liable to the same jail term as a married woman, but traditionally it has been difficult for a woman to prove her husband guilty.

This double standard has resulted in a spate of protests by women's groups and has prompted calls by lawyers for either scrapping the adultery law or revising it to make it apply equally to husband and wife.

A subcommittee of the Cortes (parliament) is working on changes in the final code and, if recent press reports are correct, will recommend that adultery cease to be a crime.

But the project must be approved by a full Cortes committee and then by the government before it is submitted to a regular session of parliament. This may take months.

The campaign started last October when a young Saragossa woman named Maria Immnaculada Bentio was acquited on an adultery charge.

The prosecution—the husband must bring the case privately—failed to prove she had committed adultery with a friend of the couple during a holiday trip to the Canary Islands.

The press, taking advantage of the new climate of political and cultural relaxation, gave the story wide play and brought home to its readers the discriminatory features of the adultery law.

Don't Wait for Him To Leave His Wife

DEAR ABBY: I am very much in love with a man I work with. The problem is his wife. Every time he starts to tell her he wants a divorce, she gets herself pregnant and he decided that he can't go through with it.

This is the third time she's pulled that on him, Abby, and I am tired of waiting for him, but I can't break it off because I love him too much.

He is 34 and I'm 20, but I've been on my own since I was 15. We've been seeing each other for three years. I could get another man real fast, but I don't want anyone but him. I know he loves me because he's so jealous, he's threatened to mess up my face if I go out on him.

Do you think he'll ever leave his wife and marry me? Am I foolish to wait for him? What should I do? — ONE-MAN GIRL.

DEAR GIRL: Wake up! No woman "gets herself pregnant." The man who claims he "loves" you is using you. No, I don't think he'll ever leave his wife and marry you. And yes, I think you're foolish to wait for him.

DEAR ABBY: A niece of mine was recently married, so I sent her a set of crystal and silver salt and pepper shakers for a wedding gift. It was not inexpensive for a woman of my means.

With her thank-you note she enclosed a bill for half again the amount I had spent on her gift. It seems that this bride had returned my gift to the jewelry store from which it was purchased, and selected a more expensive set of salt and pepper shakers in its place.

This girl was not dumb. She's a college graduate.

Not wanting to make a fuss, I paid the difference. What would you have done? — FLABBERGASTED.

DEAR FLABBERGASTED: I'd have made a fuss and NOT paid the difference. Furthermore, the salesperson at the jewelry store should not have allowed the exchange without your approval.

DEAR ABBY: I have a beautiful adult daughter who is afraid to smile because she has yellowish teeth. She brushes her teeth regularly and visits her dentist often, but her teeth just naturally have that dingy look.

Is there a solution? How about caps like the movie stars wear? — MOTHER.

DEAR MOTHER: If there is a way to whiten naturally yellowish, well-cared for teeth, I've never heard of it, and neither has any dentist I've consulted.

Wonderful World of Animals

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: Spunky, my new cockatiel, is young but can he bite hard! He's a pretty tough bird, not afraid of anything including Lady, my cat. She's a bit awed and considerably baffled by him. I figure since Spunky can stand up to her now, he should be able to when he gets older and even stronger, right?

—C.G.

DEAR C.G.: Not necessarily. The fact is, Lady's likely to become increasingly curious and-or jealous, or most likely, simply stimulated to pounce on "her" prey. A cockatiel, spunky or not, couldn't stand up to a determined feline charge.

DEAR DR. MILLER: We've just consented to having our dear dog operated on and treated for bone cancer. It was in his foot. Did we do the right thing in trying, or should we have had him put to sleep instead? We really wanted to give him his chance for life. Our friends say it would have been kinder not to. — R.Y.

DEAR R.Y.: Undoubtedly your own veterinarian presented the facts and possibilities as he saw them, in as thorough a manner as possible before you made your decision. Prolonged survival rates are seldom achieved with advanced bone cancer in the canine, since the disease has usually metastasized (spread, usually to the lungs). If the disease is detected early enough, however, a combination of surgery, chemotherapy and, in the future, immunotherapy (now experimental) may give him a reasonable chance.

DEAR DR. MILLER: We've only just moved into the neighborhood a short time, but we're already well known here. At least Ginger, our dog, is. She's been attracting all sorts of male dogs even though she was fixed three years ago. She's never been in heat and her private parts aren't swollen now. What's happened? It's all very embarassing.

DEAR V.F.: Probably Ginger has an infection in the urinary or genital tracts which is producing an odor attractive to the hangers-on. There are other possibilities, too, but conjecture won't solve the problem. Your local specific cause and do someveterinarian, given the opportunity, can track down the thing to reduce Ginger's appeal radically (and probably improve her health at the same time).

indoor gardens

By LYNN and JOEL RAPP

Dear Lynn and Joel: Just read your letter from Opal and her croton. I have a favorite plant I'd like to tell you about.

While shopping for groceries, my son (then 12 years old) saw two spider plant "babies" on the floor. He brought them to me and asked if we could take them home. I asked the man in the produce department and he said "Sure, but they won't live. They're in bad shape."

Home we did take them. And care and love were showered on them. Now, three and one-half years later they are still alive and have produced four new plants for friends and still have more than 50 plantlets.—B.J.T.

Dear B.J.T.: Nothing makes us happier than a story such as yours. Thanks for sharing it with us. You see, with love, anything is possible.

KNIT & CHAT

Variety in Afghan Kits

By MAY E. MacLEAN

I recently visited one of the manufacturers of needlepoint, embroidery and afghan kits and he showed me four particular lovely designs, each kit containing sufficient wool to make these superb designs. All are made with a "sports-weight" wool, which is not as heavy as double knitting, but slightly thicker than a four-ply fingering.

"Feeling Groovy" is a knitted afghan, shown in peach, orange and brown. It is knitted in strips with only thirty three stitches, and there are also three other color combinations. This kit retails for less than $20.

Another very striking design was "Softly," crocheted in pale yellow, gold and dark brown, though it too has three other color combinations. Again, you'll find them in the shops for less than $20.

"Canadian Sunset" is simply gorgeous. Knitted with two tones of orange and rust, it really does resemble a beautiful sunset. This particular kit is slightly more, about $22.

The fourth one which I want to tell you about is entitled "Variations on a theme" for this particular afghan can be either knit or crochet! It's the good old stand-by, the zig-zag design. It, too, comes with four other variations of color schemes, one being the popular "denim-look." The price of this one is less than $15.

Every one of these afghans can be purchased in your local yarn shop, or the wool department stores, but if you have any difficulty locating them, you can write to me c-o box 305, Paris, Ontario.

Afghans can be so warm and cosy and provide that extra bit of warmth when you are not feeling just up to par! I keep two in the family room, and they are so nice to wrap around your legs while watching TV.

Keep them in mind as January, February and March can seem endless. So it's good to have something worthwhile to knit and crochet to help pass the time!

There was one other one I forgot to mention, it's for a child, entitled "Teddy Bears' Picnic" — there are two color schemes for this one and retails for less than $8.

This week's pattern is a particularly pretty yet very simple crocheted scarf, it's just chain loops, they are right in with today's fashion scene! I have made one in two shades of mauve and silver and it's extremely chic as I wear it with a silver dress!

To order this pattern No. 7679, send seventy-five cents in coin, PLUS a stamped self addressed return envelope, long one if possible. If you do not have an envelope or stamp, please enclose an extra quarter to cover the cost of handling. Send to: May E. MacLean, "KNIT & CHAT," c-o Box B 486 Montford Drive, Dollard des Ormeaux, P.Q. H9G 1M6.

Please be sure to state pattern numbers correctly and to enclose your stamped return envelope for faster service. Allow about ten days for normal delivery.

I highly recommend the 160-page paperback book 100 Ways To Save Energy and Money In The Home.

As the foreward stresses, this book wants to help readers enjoy both a comfortable home and save on energy. It's a book that is easy to read and particularly helpful when you are seeking specific information. It contain chapters on home heating, insulation and how to save energy with hot water heating, in the kitchen and with the use of appliances. Special tips for apartment dwellers and cottage owners are also included.

An intriguing feature of the book is an invitation from the government to comment and reply to various questions. The government would like to know, for instance, if you found the book useful. if you consider it too technical, if you did anything about saving energy and how successful your endeavours were. It would also like to know if you read the whole book or only sections of it.

In addition, readers are invited to submit energy-saving ideas which they have found useful but which are not mentioned in the book.

You can obtain a copy of this money-saving book by writing to: Information Division, Energy, Mines and Resources Canada, Ottawa, Ontario K1A 0E4.

Please allow at least 2-3 weeks for delivery.

The Big Attack on Cancer

An excellent program has been established in the Detroit area in the hope that a co-ordinated attack on cancer can evolve.

A long-range, five-year plan, supported by $25 million, will soon be launched.

The purpose is "to see if more lives can be saved and the social and economic cost of cancer can be minimized when a community uses all of its resources against cancer."

The Michigan Cancer Foundation will aim all its educational resources at the earliest detection of cancer of the breast, the cervix, the rectal area and cancer of the head and neck.

Medical adivsory panels, made up of cancer specialists, will help physicians in the general practice of medicine by bringing the latest forms of treatment to their attention.

It is to be hoped that other large communities around the country will establish similar programs.

A new substance is now being used to halt bleeding. "Avitene" has recently been approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration for general surgical use. More than six years of intensive research has shown that this agent can halt bleeding more rapidly than most of the substances now in common use in the operating room.

It is expected that Avitene will add materially to the safety of the patient undergoing surgery.

The creators of the drug say that "the product has not, to our knowledge, produced any post-operative complications."

Surgeons in a large number of hospitals in America are using this new substance.

A group of patients with migraine headaches were studied by Dr. John B. Brainard, of St. Paul, Minn. These patients carefully recorded their food intake. The conclusion that Dr. Brainard arrived at was that "salted snack foods such as pretzels, potato chips and nuts may trigger a migraine attack within six to twelve hours, particularly if taken on an empty stomach."

SPEAKING OF YOUR HEALTH . . . Vanity should not keep the elderly from carrying a cane. A broken hip is a devastating experience which can often be avoided by the use of a cane.

Toys Displayed

EDMONTON (CP) — Alberta's culture department has created a special exhibition in the Provincial Museum titled The Small World of Toys. The exhibit features 100 years of toys, from 1850 to 1950, selected to represent all types of toys and how toys have changed.

More Child Rights Urged From Courts

TORONTO (CP) — A Toronto family court judge says she wants to see more legislation guaranteeing the rights of children in custody disputes.

Judge Rosalie Silberman Abella said in an interview she supports the new trend of appointing lawyers for children.

"A 12-year-old, or even a six-year-old, must have some way of effectively representing what he wants or needs to the court," she said, adding that a child can get a lawyer through legal aid or Ontario's official guardian.

Lloyd Perry, official guardian of Ontario, says lawyers have counselled a record number of children recently.

Roy McMurtry, Ontario attorney-general, recently said: "For so many years it was assumed that the lawyers representing the parents primarily want to act in the interest of the child but, too often, that isn't the case at all."

Judge Abella said changes in federal and provincial family law are needed, as well as legisation to delineate jurisdiction of the courts.

"At the moment, you go to the Supreme Court for divorce, family court for maintenance; you can go to surrogate court for custody," Judge Abella said. "Different judges have overlapping jurisdictions."

McMurtry said the provincial and federal governments have planned a pilot project for a unified court in Hamilton which would allow people to go to one court and deal with al problems related to marriage breakdown.

Lay school growing steadily

Winter opening Jan. 25

The Greater Victoria Lay School of Theology is growing steadily, its chairman, Canon Thomas Bailey, said this week in announcing the start of the winter term Jan. 25.

The school "is obviously meeting a real need and is making a contribution to the growth of ecumenical understanding in our area," Bailey said.

"Last term 135 students were registered, an increase of over 100 per cent in three years. The school represents a wide range of churches and denominations and has some agnostic seekers as well. Registration is open to any adults," he added.

Tuesday sessions will begin at 8 p.m. Jan. 25 in the Christian education centre at Metropolitan United Church, Quadra and Pandora.

Wednesday morning sessions will begin at 9:45 a.m. Jan. 26 in the lounge of Christ Church Cathedral's Memorial Hall. Both sessions last for 10 weeks, ending March 29 and 30.

The Tuesday program lasts for two hours and costs $8 or $15 for husband and wife. The Wednesday program lasts one hour and costs $5 per person.

On Tuesday evenings, the first hour is spent in the study of church history. Canon Bailey is the lecturer and will discuss the Reformation. "The aim will be to provide students with historial and theologial information toward an understanding and appreciation of the Christina traditions and confessions of today," he said.

In the second hour there will be a choice of two courses. The first, on the ancient world, will be given by professors of the classics department of the University of Victoria. The course will deal with the background of both the Bible and the classic period of theology.

A study will be made of the history of the ancient world, Greek and Roman religions, mystery cults, Socrates, St. Paul and the early days of Christianity.

The second choice for the second hour on Tuesday nights is a study of the Epistle to the Romans, with Rev. Dr. H. W. Kerley of Fairfield United Church as lecturer.

It will be a compreshensive survey of the epistle with a detailed study of the text, together with an assessment of its significance for Christians today.

The Wednesday morning hour will be devoted to a study by Canon Bailey of the First Epistle to the Corinthians.

The school is a co-operative enterprise of lay people from Anglican, Presbyterian, Roman Catholic and United Churches, and is under the patronage of the Greater Victoria Council of Churches.

Registration may be made to the registrar, A. E. Norris, 1278 Camrose Crescent, 386-2313.

Orthodox Christmas

Home celebrations

Friday was Christmas Day for Orthodox Christians around the world. In Victoria, the little Orthodox community joined in the celebration with church services and the observance of religious traditions in the home.

Church services were held in the little church at 3801 Cadboro Bay Road, where Rev. Gleb Jensen is the priest.

According to Jensen, the heart of every Orthodox Christian home is the icon corner where family devotions take place, making every home a little church.

For this celebration, he said, the star and Nativity icon became the focal point, making Christ's birth visibly present to the beholder in a sacramental way.

In Serbian homes, he said, the dining room was strewn with fresh hay as was the church, a reminder of the manger where Christ lay. Ukrainian homes hold the Christmas Eve supper of 12 lenten dishes after sighting the first evening star. Carollers go from house to house carrying with them a symbolic star on a long pole.

In Romanian homes, the priest visits every home Christmas Eve to bring the Nativity icon for veneration. The centre of every Russian home is the Yolka or Christmas tree. Presents are exchanged, but to a lesser degree than elsewhere, Jensen said.

"All these customs enhance the central theme summed up in the words which are used as the traditional greeting: 'Christ is born.' To this the receiver replies, 'Glorify Him,' or, 'God is with us.'"

The Victoria congregation is known as the Holy Theophany Orthodox Parish and belongs to the Russian Orthodox Church Outside Russia. Although under the protection of the True Russian Church, it also includes Greek, Serbian, Ukrainian and other ethnic groups as well as many English-speaking converts.

Jensen said the aim of the parish was to preserve and maintain the Orthodox Christian traditions and to spread the light among all peeople, whatever their cultural or religious backgrounds.

The parish is embarking on an educational program of slides and talks during the next two months.

"We hope to inform the Greater Victoria community of the rich heritage and unique spirituality that the Orthodox Church possesses," he said.

Anyone interested in seeing this program can reach him at 477-8892.

Perspectives

By Rev. J. A. Davidson

The low man on the ecclesiastical totem-pole these days seems to be the pastor who has week-by-week leadership of a congregation. Recently an old friend suggested to me that I might make it big in the church if I got out of the parish and showed my stuff in the wider arena of the church. He seemed a little dismayed when I said with a smile that I would not consider a demotion at my age.

A Roman Catholic friend tells me that in some parts of his church a priest is considered to be undergoing some kind of punishment if he is sent to a parish after having served in an administrative or other special ministry. A woman of my own denomination, the United Church of Canada, told me that her nephew, a bright young theological student, was not planning on serving in the parish ministry, but, as she put it, "in a wider and more significant field of service." Before I could think of an appropriately rude retort, she added, "But, then, he always has been clever."

A few years ago, Peter L. Berger, a sociologist in the U.S. who has specialized in religious institutions, said, "The sharp edge of the Christian engagement with the modern world is not likely to be made in the parish." Many church leaders have accepted that almost as a dogma, and it has caused much anguish among us simple parish ministers.

Of course the Christian engagement with the modern world cannot be made exclusively in the parish. The church must extend and develop its specialized ministries and search for more places of engagement with the world. But if there is no effective engagement with the world in and through the local churches, there will eventually be no effective Christian engagement anywhere. Rev. Hans Kung, an influential Roman Catholic theologian, has said that the local church "is in no way to be seen as a subdivision of the real 'church'." (In other words, the parish is not be seen as a sort of franchise operation.) Father Kung added, "The whole church can only be understood in terms of the local church and its concrete actions. The local church is the real church."

A key reality here is that the economic base of Christian engagement with the world is primarily in the parish. Perhaps it shouldn't be that way — but no one seems to be developing a feasible alternative. In the United Church of Canada, nearly 90 per cent of the money used in the wider work and mission of the church comes off the offering plates which are passed each Sunday in its more than 4,000 congregations. The with-it clergy would not be able to do their special jobs were it not for the get-it parish clergy.

It is not easy to be a parish minister these days. The stresses and pressures of the job have increased appreciably in recent years. But, despite the noticeable incidence of disillusionment among parish minsters, there seems now to be new enthusiasm and new excitement among them. Without strong and lively local churches there will be, in the long run, no effective Christian presence in our society. Many of us parish ministers no longer listen respectfully when a theologian or sociologist or church bureaucrat or journalist sounds off on the alleged defunctness of the parish. And it is not arrogance but simple assurance that causes us to think that we, despite all our inadequacies, are primary leaders in Christian witness and mission.

Churches urged to help furnish Nigel House

Building designed for persons with physical handicaps

A call has gone out to churches in Greater Victoria to aid in the furnishing of Nigel House, now under construction in Saanich for The Vancouver Island Housing Association for the Physically Disabled.

Nigel House will be a boarding residence for 35 disabled people. The building, off Vernon Avenue near the Saanich municipal hall, is being financed by the federal government. But when it is completed in the spring it will be necessary to furnish it and the CMHC loan does not cover furniture.

The building is designed for people in wheelchairs or with physical handicaps requiring special facilities. However, the tenants will be completely self-sufficient in personal care.

Meals and some domestic help are to be provided to enable occupants to live a more expanded life, taking jobs or carrying out interests not possible without that help.

The building will contain nine double rooms and 17 single rooms, each with a proptrly designed bathroom, lounges, dining room, kitchen, laundry room and storage.

A front door intercom and an emergency call system from bathrooms and bedrooms will be installed. Telephone and television outlets and electric heating control will be provided in each room.

Outdoor areas include a communal courtyard - garden and more than half of the units will have balconies or enclosed patios.

Rates for board and lodging will be about $270 a month each for double occupancy or $380 a month for a single room. A government subsidy may be obtained by low-income occupants.

In a letter this week, Rev. Dr. A. E. King, president, Greater Victoria Council of Churches, cited a recommendation by the council to give aid to VIHAP.

He said the association needed $24,000 for furniture and equipment "and they need it quickly."

"It is quite understandable that the association now appeals to the churches of Victoria for help because the church was represented on the earliest committee set up to plan such a facility about eight years ago," King wrote.

The present Council of Churches committee studying the appeal are Mrs. Frances Elford, Rev. R.C. Nelson of Grace Lutheran Church and Rev. Phil Ross of Esquimalt United Church.

It has been suggested that a congregation, group of congregations or organizations within congregations may wish to furnish individual rooms.

It will cost $800 for a single bedroom, $1,300 for a double bedroom, $4,000 for two lounges, $1,700 for the dining room and $11,000 for domestic supplies and equipment. The total needed is $42,000.

In an interview this week King said it was a "tremendous thing that church people have an opportunity to be involved."

He said some believed it was up to the government to provide such aid. "But I believe it is essential that the people be involved, otherwise the program becomes alienated from the very ones it seeks to serve."

"I believe the churches will look upon this as an opportunity for service locally and will reach out enthusiastically to perform this Christian service."

Donations to VIHAP may be sent to the Greater Victoria Council of Churches, 1411 Quadra, or to Mrs. Elsie Turner, 4560 Viewmont.

St. Joseph's inaugurates new organ on Sunday

The new pipe organ at St. Joseph's Roman Catholic Church — built in Victoria by Hugo Spilker — will be inaugurated at a special service at 10:30 a.m. Sunday in the church at 745 West Burnside.

The church choir will be augmented by singers from St. Andrew's Cathedral, St. Patrick's and Sacred Heart churches to make up a choir of 72 voices under the direction of Jack Lenaghan, organist and choirmaster.

The organ is a gift of church members Ted and Joan Fletcher and Mrs. Fletcher's sister, Mrs. Sylvia Lindner of Alliston, Ont., in memory of the two sisters' parents, Leonard and Mary Calnan, who came to Vancouver Island from the south of England.

Installation costs are being paid from an organ fund raised by parishioners, Rev. Bernard Hanley said this week.

"We're very pleased to have the new organ to replace the electric organ we've been using," Lenaghan said.

The organ was built by Spilker, well-known organ builder, to a design worked out by him and Lenaghan.

Hanley said the organ fitted in with the church's role of "nurture and outreach." It will nurture his congregation and also be used in outreach to the community.

"We plan to have recitals and concerts in the church now that we have the new organ," he said.

The public will be invited to a recital at 8 p.m. Feb. 22, he said, when Bishop Remi De Roo or a representative will dedicate the organ.

It as 783 speaking pipes and 24 stops, Lenaghan said, and can be described as a liturgical and classic organ.

Rabbi offering lecture series in Hebrew, basic Judaism

Rabbi Leo Abrami, who was recently installed as leader of Victoria's Jewish community at Temple Emanuel, Blanshard and Pandora, will give a program of weekly lectures starting Monday.

On Monday nights for 10 weeks he will teach Hebrew for beginners and will give a course in basic Judaism.

The language course will begin at 7:30 p.m. and will cost $15 for the 10 weeks. The course on Judaism, starting at 8:45 p.m., will also cost $15 for 10 weeks.

The Hebrew course will include the use of records and tapes which participants may take home for extra study, Abrami said.

"One of the aims of the language course is to help travellers going to Israel," he said.

The course on basic Judaism is a survey of Jewish beliefs and practices, he said.

Starting at 8 p.m. Wednesday a third course will be given under the title An Invitation to Jewish Mysticism: An Introduction to Kabbalah.

This Abrami described as a study of the interpretation of the esoteric tests of the Bible and other works.

He said it would include the study of the Zohar or Book of Splendor, the basic source book of Jewish mysticism and an initiation into the practice of Kabbalah including meditation.

It has to do with the knowledge of God and communion with God, he said.

The course will cost $30 for 10 weeks.

Relationships theme of three workshops

Enhancing Relationships will be the theme of three workshops to be held at 7:30 p.m. on consecutive Mondays starting next Monday at Metropolitan United Church.

Dr. Ron Tinney of the psychology department of the faculty of education at the University of Victoria will lead the first workshop and Dr. Rey Carr of the same department will conduct the last two.

The programs have been arranged by the greater Victoria Citizens Counselling Centre and the cost is $4 for three nights or $2 per night.

Groups will be formed to start Jan. 31 for eight weeks on assertiveness training, education for marriage, marriage enrichment, developing potential, growth and earning to deal with anger.

A Friday morning on transition will also begin the end of the month. It will deal with the transition caused by losing a job, a mate, retirement and other losses or changes.

The fee for participation in a group is $7 per person or $11 per couple or $10 per person for those taking the lecture course and then entering a group.

Registration may be made at the centre office in Metropolitan United, 907 Pandora, phone 384-9934.

Stake meeting open to public

The 10 a.m. Sunday session of the Victoria Stake conference of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints at 1990 Quadra will be open to the public. Elder Howard Biddulph, president of the Victoria Stake will speak. Elder Robert McCue and Elder Richard Krikava, counsellors to the president, will also be featured speakers on the conference theme of Every Member a Missionary. The conference begins today.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Sunday, January 9

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You gain new perspective: your position is stronger than might be anticipated. Key is accomplishment, achievement. Efforts now pay dividends. Older individual backs you, gives support to views, enables you to put across program.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You have more appeal — popularity surges. Personal magnetism, creativity play major roles. Members of opposite sex, children all are apt to be part of scenario. You get long-distance message which aids in cementing loose ends, establishing stronger ties for special relationship.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You can break new ground. A very "showy" person tends to invade your privacy. Sense of humor is essential. But refuse to give up something for nothing. You can laugh and be pleasant, but be sure others understand that you know your business, that you don't intend to play the fool.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Accent on short trips, relatives, ability to be a peacemaker. Show that you are capable of rising above petty claims, jealousies. Be flexible. Deal with Aquarius, Leo persons. Give aid to one who taught you much.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your efforts bring results from afar. Older individual, who uses "words with authority," could play important role. Sense of security is heightened. What seemed out-for-reach could suddenly become available.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You're intrigued by mystery, the occult, what is hidden, obscurred, bathed in a labyrinth of procedures. Money is involved — taxes, shelters, agreements with partner or mate could all be part of scenario.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Public relations, being correctly quoted — these areas deserve, and need, attention. Wait, observe, check legal papers. Spiritual adviser can now be of aid, perhaps in a more "solid" way than you imagine.

IF JANUARY 9th IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are dramatic, vital, vibrant, spoiled by opposite sex, passionate, temperamental, creative and hot-tempered. You will, this year, be going through a journey of self-discovery. You will also learn that when alone you are not necessarily lonely. January and October are outstanding months of 1977 for you. Aries, Libra persons play important roles in your life.

Astrological Forecast for Monday, January 10

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Finish what you start; take long-range view. Don't attempt to substitute for quality. Weights, measures are more important than usual — know it and be aware, alert. Individual who pertorms special services may seek legal agreement. You have time!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): What is realy important to you comes surging to forefront. Includes change, flattery, achievement, creativity — and love. You get to heart of matters by being more independent, original. Imprint your own style. Leo, Aquarius could figure prominently.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Practical matters dominate. Questions concerning security, long-range projects command attention. Leo, Aquarius and Cancer individuals are very much in picture. Study Taurus message. One who aided, taught you in past still available. Don't permit pride to block progress. Ask!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Be flexible, versatile without spreading efforts too thin. Gemini, Sagittarius figure prominently. Accent on talks, written messages, calls, relatives who "won't let go." Problem of weight, diet could be constructively examined.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Gains indicated if you are diplomatic — avoid direct confrontations. Accent on what has been a secret. Discretion is necessary. A closed-door session could be on agenda. Taurus, Scorpio and another Libra could be in picture.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Friend may be well-meaning but misinformed. Key is to be self-reliant, to perfect techniques, to face actuality rather than to create fantasy or false face. Pisces, Virgo figure prominently. Romantic interlude could be on agenda. Don't make more of it than it deserves!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Added responsibility is featured — you get chance to organize, to bring priorities into focus. There is pressure — you might enjoy it. Member of opposite sex plays significant role. Marital status is spotlighted.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Education language and communication — this trinity is emphasized. You gain recognition from "surprise sources." You complete project. You join forces with one associated with import-export business.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You come alive — you are more alert, enthusiastic. You accept chanllenges in healthy manner. You are involved and enjoy it. If single, you could be talking about marriage. If married, a business enterprise — or addition to family — could dominate.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Lie low. Be discreet. Play cards close to chest. Take nothing for granted. Avoid self-deception. Accent on legalities, co-operative efforts, public relations ability to measure pulse of public. Aquarian plays significant role.

IF JANUARY 10th IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are creative, temperamental, original, constantly seeking affection, in love yith love, ready for one of your most productive years, with September marked as your most significant month of 1977. Leo, Aquarius persons play important roles in your life. Emotional wound heals. You are recovering from setback. In February, you start anew — you will long remember this year as you become more financially and emotionally secure.

RHODESIA'S FIRST LINE OF DEFENCE

War Comes To 'Gem' Of a Town

By PAUL SMURTHWAITE

UMTALI, Rhodesia (Reuter) — Five years ago this Mozambique border town was a sparkling little gem on the map of white Rhodesia.

Today it is the country's only real garrison town. The army, police and air force dominate all aspects of everyday life and "the war" dominates civilian gossip.

For Umtali is Rhodesia's first line of defence in the event of an all-out thrust by black nationalist guerrillas operating from Mozambique.

If Umtali fell the guerrillas would advance against the capital Salisbury, some 170 miles away.

Already the town has suffered a number of rocket and mortar attacks from the other side of the border, but so far only one civilian has been killed.

The effect of living only three miles from the border has had a devastating effect on the economy of Umtali. In December alone, three schools, three hotels and at least five local businesses announced plans to close

The real estate market became a sick joke long ago. One of the latest properties to come on the market is advertised in an Umtali agent's shop window: "For sale: 156 acres farmland, four bedroomed house, good view over Mozambique, price 12,000 Rhodesian dollars (about $21,710)."

But despite the threat that hangs over Umtali with every week's delay in achieving a Rhodesia peace settlement, white morale remains remarkably high.

To comprehend why the people are prepared to risk life and property rather than flee to the comparative safety of Salisbury, Umtali's physical surroundings must be taken into account.

Author Evelyn Waugh once wrote of the town: "There is neither snow nor sea, but there is everything else."

Waugh's view would be tarnished today by the rows of camouflaged army trucks lining downtown streets and the fact that the hotel in which he stayed is a military headquarters.

He probably also would have disliked the nightly drunken brawls in the downtown bars— now the hangouts of Rhodesian troops.

But he would still have been breathless at the first sight of Umtali, nestling in a lush green valley and surrounded by some of the biggest granite mountains in Africa.

Five years ago, Umtali had three major claims to fame. It was the border town for road and rail traffic between Salisbury and the then Portuguese-controlled port of Beira, the centre of a major tourist area and a market town for surrounding citrus-fruit and cattle farmers.

It remains a farming centre, but the closure of the Mozambique border and the constant clashes between Rhodesian troops and nationalist guerrillas have dissuaded all but the most stout-hearted tourists from visiting the area.

In the bar of one hotel which overlooks the Mozambique border there are several ominous signs of the times.

There's a gun rack for drinkers, both civilian and army, to park their semi-automatic rifles. Spare ammunition is available in case the place is hit by guerrillas.

And in an upstairs bedroom where guests once gazed dreamily over spectacular mountainous country into Mozambique, a powerful telescope now scans the horizon.

Few tourists fancy spending their vacations in army observation posts.

Geneva Talks Delay On Rhodesia Hinted

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (UPI) — British negotiator Ivor Richard says there is an even chance that black majority rule will be achieved in Rhodesia but indicated the Geneva conference on the question may not reconvene in mid-January as scheduled.

"We underestimated the amount of time needed to work out a settlement," Richard said on arrival for talks with Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere on the sixth stopover of his Southern Africa shuttle.

"But I still think there's a 50-50 chance we'll get a settlement."

Richard did not specifically say the Jan. 17 target date for reopening the Geneva conference could not be met.

After encountering a hard-line attitude from leaders of Rhodesia's white minority regime last week, Richard was bouyed by support for his effort from Marxist Mozambique.

"Mozambique will give all necessary support and co-operation for the success of the present (Rhodesia) negotiations," the national radio said after Richard and Mozambican president Samora Machel conferred for several hours.

This could prompt backing from Nyerere and leaders of the three other black "front-line" states bordering Rhodesia at a mini-summit this weekend.

Richard also met in Mozambique with Robert Mugabe, closely linked with the Marxist-backed Zimbabwe People's Army, the main guerrilla group battling Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith's white minority regime.

In his one-day Tanzanian stopover, Richard also was expected to meet with the militant Rhodesian nationalist Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole.

A British source said Richard will stay overnight in Nairobi before proceeding to Lusaka, Zambia, to hear the views of African presidents at the weekend summit.

He plans to meet Smith and South African Prime Minister John Vorster next week.

The seven-week Geneva conference adjourned just before Christmas, stalled by disagreement between Smith and black Rhodesian leaders on the pace of transition to majority rule.

MONTREAL AGENCY

You Can Rent an Elephant But the Feed Bill Is $175

MONTREAL (CP) — Canadians can rent almost anything these days, but Montreal probably has the only place where you can rent an elephant.

Wild Kingdom is a rental agency set up 13 months ago just for that purpose.

Owner and director Claude Moreau says the agency's animal inventory, worth about $10,000, includes cougars, leopards, chimps, and domestic and exotic birds such as cockatoos and an African parrot.

"What I don't hold, I can get elsewhere," says Mr. Moreau, 24.

He said he believes the rental agency is unique in Canada, but that there are a few in the United States.

So far the agency has rented animals to shopping malls for displays, to photographic studios, and to advertising agencies who want to film a wildcat or Eleanor the Chimp sampling or appearing along with products.

"With new CRTC (Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission) rulings a lot more television advertisements will have to be done in Canada," he said.

He referred to a current advertisement where a lion's golden mane is being combed with an electric hair dryer, and another in which a cougar romps about the interior of a new car. Both ads were made in the U.S., he said.

Animals are transported in the agency's two trucks and a station wagon, while a trailer is rented for extra-large beasts.

Animal Kingdom has a full-time trainer who looks after the animals' needs and takes them wherever rented. "He's the only one allowed to lay a finger on any of the animals; he knows their personalities."

Start-up capital was a problem, Mr. Moreau said. "We're a peculiar business. If I was manufacturing nuts and bolts they (fianciers) could understand it."

Getting insurance "was the biggest pain," and the most expensive part of that was public liability. "All we need is for a lion to go berserk when we're putting on a display."

All the animals are insured, except against accidental death.

Major costs of running an animal rental agency, apart from insurance, are food and veterinary bills. A full-grown lion eats about seven pounds of horsemeat a day, for example, not to mention special inoculations, pills and other medical treatment.

Elephants cost around $150 to $175 a week to feed and care for, "which is one reason we don't have one of our own." The other reason may be that an Asian elephant now costs about $12,000.

The agency obtains elephants from a zoological supply house, where Mr. Moreau worked before starting his own business.

Rental fees vary widely according to the time used, transport distance and location.

A bobcat taken to a photographic studio to pose for pictures for a calendar, would cost about $125 to $150 an hour.

"That's not too bad when you consider animals of our species pose as models for $30 to $40 an hour," said Mr. Moreau.

COUNTER CAPS

A healthy child who becomes irritable and cranky and unable to sleep well at night may be infested with pinworms.

Pinworms are a common nuisance and their eggs easily passed on from person to person.

If the child is scratching because of this constant irritation, the anal area will look red and angry. Take a flashlight at night and see if you can spot any tiny, white visitors around the anus. If nothing is obvious, try rubbing a bit of scotch tape on the end of a tongue depressor around the area. If it is pinworms, they can be eliminated quickly and inexpensively. Treatment is in liquid, tablet or an effervescent drink form. Ask us to explain the treatment.

Where there is doubt about the cause of such irritations, see your doctor.

Results, with the objective in brackets: Tuesday at Sanscha Hall in Sidney — 164 (175); Wednesday at The Bay for the first time — 93 (150); Thursday aboard HMC Provider — 434 (540) and Friday at Mount Douglas high school — 127 (125).
Savage said there will be a second week of clinics this month, starting Jan. 17.

West Coast's Poor Soils Need Lots of Nuntrients

GARDENING
jack beastall

By JACK BEASTALL

Most newcomers to this area are dismayed with what we call "soil" in our gardens. Frankly, we do not have much in the way of soil anywhere in B.C. excepting a few fertile valleys.

There are good reasons for the paucity and poor-quality of the soils on the west coast.

This island exists because of the masses of rock formed in previous volcanic eras. Glacial action and weather combined to break down some types of rocks, leaving either tracts of clay or small areas of sand and gravel.

These products of powdered rock became contaminated with organic materials, making it possible for low forms of plants to grow, which added more organic matter. Grasses and sub-shrubs followed and finally the western continental rain forest.

Reduced light beneath the tree canopy and competition for soil nutrients lessened the population of grasses and subshrubs, and also reduced the amount of organic material added to the soil.

This loss was not replaced by the coniferous forest trees which shed only 10% of their foliage annually, mostly in the form of small needles. Therefore, in forested areas only enough organic matter has been added to the clay and sand base over the centuries to give us about four inches of top soil.

Compared with other parts of Canada, this amount is insignificant. The good soils of Ontario resulted from large quantities of foliage shed by the deciduous trees which prevail in that region, and the deep soils of some prairie areas from the lush growth of prairie grass which is composted each winter with nitrogen-rich snow.

No comparable legacy awaited the early settlers of coastal British Columbia. A few fertile valleys and plateaus were discovered and farmed, but in most of the area the basic clay and sand had to be improved before food plants could flourish.

The product we call soil is a mixture of mineral and organic matter. The organic content is reduced to its chemical components by micro-organisms, and the chemicals are used by plants.

Every inch of growth made by a grass, a sub-shrub, or a forest tree represents a certain number of cubic inches of organic matter converted to chemicals and removed from the soil. Unless the vegetation replaces the equivalent of this loss annually, the soil gradually returns to its base of clay or sand and the amount of vegetation in the area become less.

The soil a gardener refers to as a "good soil" has the correct proportions of organic and mineral matter. A "poor" soil has low organic content and high mineral. Add organic matter to a poor soil and it is immediately improved.

Climate also has an efect on soil. Snow is high in nitrogen which is collected from the air and trapped between the flakes as they fall on one another. In areas of heavy snowfall this nitrogen is added to the soil in spring as the snow melts.

The air temperatures in areas subject to snow prevents plant growth. Therefore, very little of the soil's reserve of nutrients is used during the snow period. In spring there are sufficient plant nutrients available to promote rapid and steady growth.

In areas having a mild winter climate conditions are different. Plants are never totally dormant and plant nutrients are being used throughout the winter to maintain foliage and even flowers. This amounts to an almost continuous loss of organic matter.

To be available to plants, soil nutrients must be in a chemical form that is soluble in water because plants can only absorb liquids. A mild winter climate in the northern temperate zone usually indicates heavy winter rainfall and the minimum of snow. The rain collects the soluble chemicals and carries them to ditches, creeks, rivers and eventually to the ocean, resulting in considerable loss. The lack of large amounts of snow causes a soil poor in nitrogen.

Thus the soils in areas of mild winter climate lose much and gain little due to the prevailing weather.

To maintain a soil suitable for growing healthy garden plants, these annual losses must be replaced by the gardener. Replacement is accomplished by adding organic matter to the soil.

Organic matter is the waste products of living things. The discarded parts of garden plants and the manures from domesticated animals are the main sources of organic matter for the home gardener.

At the start of the year we have time to contemplate and to plan our gardens for the coming season. We can decide just what we would like to have and how it will be obtained.

Knowing the reasons for the poor soils that abound in this area gives us clues to many of our gardening problems, and knowing the one soil ingredient which will eliminate many of those problems makes it possible for us to have the productive garden of our dreams.

Plants cannot be better than the soil in which they grow. A poor soil produces poor plants, and since nature abhors anything but the best it is a law that they be destroyed.

Destruction is carried out by adverse weather which the weak plants cannot withstand, and by pests and diseases to which such plants are prone, and these are the three main problems the gardener strives to avoid.

Fertilizers and sprays are not the answer. They are stop-gap measures that fail to correct the cause of the problems. The cause is soil low in organic matter, a condition that can be remedied without resorting to the use of anything that may further damage the environment.

To grow the healthy plants we have envisioned our main concern must be the soil. When time and energy is spent on improving the soil the plants take care of themselves and the gardener has more time to enjoy the fruits of his labor.

We can scrap all those New Year gardening resolutions which we know from experience will never be put into operation, and substitute the one that will result in the garden we have always wanted and be a goal within our reach.

We can resolve to replace the organic matter which has been converted into nutrients used by our plants and leached by our weather with quantities sufficient to turn the clay or sand into a highly productive garden.

And as a reminder of that resolution we can put a big sign on the toolshed door reading "No soil, No garden."

Work For Week

Check soil around foundation planting for dryness even after light rains. Wide eaves and dry walls combine to keep this area arid.

Check plants and cuttings wintering in coldframe. They need both air and dampness at roots.

Balcony, sundeck and patio plants in containers will need protection against hard frost, but material must be dry. Protect root area with burlap, old matting or extra box (wood) as insulation.

Pruning of outdoor grapes can be done now while canes are dormant.

Bring screened compost under cover (shed or greenhouse) for early sowing. Sterilize some with moist heat for special needs.

Remaining Jerusalem artichokes in ground should be lifted and stored a short time for use; keep a few of the best tubers for planting next month.

VOLUNTEERS WANTED

VANCOUVER (CP) — The University of British Columbia is seeking 24 volunteers to test a new male contraceptive.

Dr. Robin Percival-Smith of the department of obstetrics and gynecology and Morton Warner, an assistant professor in the department of health care and epidemiology, have received a grant from the World Health Organization for the project.

Volunteers will receive six injections of a two-hormone contraceptive, then sperm samples will be tested.

Students Say Bourassa Got What He Deserved

MONTREAL (CP) — "We can sit here and talk until 1980," said the 16-year-old bilingual student. "We have a different ancestry, a different heritage, our environment is different and we have been educated differently."

She was summing up a debate between groups of six French and six English students from Montreal high schools who met to discuss the Nov. 15 election which brought the Parti Quebecois to power.

The students, aged between 13 and 16 and each from a different school, were invited to discuss such issues as Quebec independence, language rights and economics. They were also asked to fill out questionnaires on party preference.

All six students from French schools voted PQ on the questionnaires, while the English pupils split between the Liberals and the conservative Union Nationale.

Most agreed, however, that the deposed Liberal administration of Robert Bourassa got what it deserved when its huge majority in the 110-seat national assembly was reduced to a minority of 27 seats.

"At the beginning we were afraid, but finally we told ourselves it's time for a change, said Sylvie Ouellet. "To be taken in by the Liberals or to be taken in by the PQ is the same thing, but we decided to take a chance with the Quebecers."

Two French students argued strongly for Quebec separation. Raymond Lachapelle said the province has the natural resources and manpower to make it alone.

"The only thing we don't have a great deal of is oil. . . . With this in mind, one mustn't be too afraid of what would happen if Quebec separates."

But Michael Hamelin, born of French-Canadian parents and attending an English school, argued: "We're in the 20th century now. We're a growing country and I don't think Quebec has any logical reason for separating."

Ronny Perrotta, 13, said Quebec would be in trouble if it couldn't appeal to the federal government for help.

The language question, especially the Official Language Act which funnels children from non-English families into French schools, was hotly debated. It was significant that the debate was conducted mostly in French.

While opinions were widely divergent on almost every point, everyone hoped there would not be a mass exodus of English-Canadians.

"It would be unfortunate because the English are not stupid, they have a value just like the French, and their leaving would be a loss, just as if I left," said Jacques Levesque, who is no relation of the new premier.

None of the students saw the promised referendum on Quebec independence as an instant panacea for the province.

One student said Quebecers of both languages would still be debating separatism "when we're all senior citizens."

Patients at Ease With a Computer

LONDON (CP) — Some patients would rather give delicate medical information to a computer than to their doctor, psychologists concluded after a five-year experiment.

The study, reported in the British Medical Journal, found that alcoholics requiring medical treatment gave a more reliable description of their drinking habits to a computer than to a human interrogator.

The experimenters, working in a Glasgow hospital, said patients who had never seen a computer were completely at their ease when questions were put to them on a typewriter or television screen, apparently because the computer was impersonal and had no tone of voice to appear—or seem to appear—censorious or disgusted.

Another advantage, the researchers said, is that the computer is tireless and can ask the same questions all day without appearing bored, tired or depressed. Deaf people preferred it because it communicated with them visually, avoiding embarrassment.

Dr. Robert Lucas, a research psychologist, foresaw further developments.

The computer could be programmed to adjust to the response time of the patient, slowing or accelerating its questioning. When patients take longer to answer diagnostic questions because they are uncertain, the computer could be programmed to measure the delay and evaluate the answer accordingly.

Some parts of a physical examination, such as pulse and temperature taking, could also be handed over to computers, which would pass on routine information to the consultant as a basis for his examination and recommendations for treatment.

Patients responded to the computers questions by pushing "Yes," "No," "Don't Know" or "Repeat" buttons.

Tests on 40 alcoholic patients revealed that the drinkers, on average, confessed to consuming more than 1½ times as much alcohol to the computer as the quantities they admitted to a human interrogator.

The researchers said this suggests a potential for getting accurate information in other situations in which a patient might feel embarrassment or shame in talking directly to another person.

Details of sexually transmitted diseases, socially unacceptable abnormalities, habitual wife or child assault and other conditions probably would be obtained more accurately by the computer.

Alcoholism Battled

LYNN LAKE, Man. (CP) — Management and labor are cooperating to combat alcoholism in this northern Manitoba mining community of 3,000.

For four years the United Steelworkers of America local here has been maintaining a drug and alcohol committee to provide counselling and, where necessary, trips to detoxification centres in Thompson, The Pas or Winnipeg, 700 miles to the southeast.

Sherritt Gordon Mines Ltd. on its part, has been treating abuse of alcohol as an affliction rather than automatic grounds for dismissal.

The company will refer a person to the committee if it sees work is suffering because of a problem with alcohol.

The employee is not forced to accept the help offered but there is a strong incentive: if he refuses, he may lose his job.

"Most people know they have a problem but they don't admit it, because there's a stigma attached," said Neil Schafer, the only one of the four original members still on the committee. "We never tell a person he's an alcoholic, but we confront him with facts and try to get him to see that he has a problem."

If a person is sent out of town to a detoxification centre, he is put on sick leave and his records never indicate what his illness was.

He receives $133 a week.

"It's much less than most guys make in a week," said Mr. Schafer, "but it's better than getting fired."

Since the program's inception, about 100 persons have received the committee's services. Mr. Schafer said they have had varying degrees of success.

"Nobody can go through the program without it having some impact. But it may not take hold right away. With some, all it does is plant the seed."

Recently, the committee has been paying more attention to prevention.

MUST HAVE DATA

"It's a slow and painful process. It's a matter of educating not only top management but the front-line supervisors. A lot of supervisors are personal friends of the guys and they will cover for them.

"What we are asking the supervisors to do is keep track of a guy who misses a shift on a regular basis and let us know about it.

"Lynn Lake is a small town. If a guy misses a shift, we know where he was, even if he brings a doctor's certificate saying he was sick. But the company needs data before it can act."

Following up is another important aspect of the committee's work, Mr. Schafer said.

"Most people who undergo treatment find it difficult to return to Lynn Lake because the same old problems exist. Whatever caused them to drink—a bad marriage, dislike for the job, dislike of Lynn Lake—must still be faced. And there are no professional people . . . no psychiatrists or social workers to help them."

Social pressure can be influential. The fact that people know they are being watched can slow people down.

The committee's resources are limited, but, Mr. Schafer said, it's a lot better than nothing.

"There really was no one here four years ago to take care of these people. It was much easier to laugh it off."

City Magazines Flourish

TORONTO (CP) — Advice ranging from plant care to home furnishings for urban dwellers characterize city magazine publications, which are becoming increasingly successful.

"Our whole secret is that we print phone numbers," said Alexander Ross, editor of Toronto Life.

"We give out information that people can use in their daily lives. If newspapers ever did that, we'd be out of business."

Mr. Ross said the magazine, which almost folded in 1973, has been taken over by publisher Michael De Pencier who put the emphasis on "young urban trendies" and the circulation increased to 55,000 from the 1973 low of 30,000.

"Where to get stuff cheap" and "Where to get stuff fixed" were two of the best-selling cover stories for the magazine last year, Mr. Ross said, adding he plans to use at least one of them again next year.

On the other hand, an article about gay capitalism and another on Jewish developers were so controversial that many people cancelled their subscriptions.

A recent poll of Toronto Life readers indicated that 68 per cent of the readers had incomes of $15,000 or more.

Toronto Calendar, part of a chain which also publishes magazines in Montreal, Vancouver and Washington, D.C., appeals to even more affluent readers.

The magazine is delivered free to 170,000 Toronto homes, whose owners are in the top 25-per-cent income bracket.

The method benefits advertisers because it gives them only readers who are able to afford their goods and services.

About 80 per cent of a Calender magazine is listings of where to go, what to do, and whom to see, said Richmond Balentine, Calendar president.

Washington Post

PLAINS, Ga. — Jimmy Carter and the Democratic leadership of Congress agreed Friday to support a $25 billion to $30 billion two-year economic stimulus program that would include up to $11 billion in tax rebates on individual U.S. 1976 federal income taxes.

The stimulus package that Carter will propose to Congress would also involve over the 1977 and 1978 fiscal years. $7 billion to $10 billion in new government spending for jobs and public works programs, permanent tax cuts for low and middle income taxpayers who do not itemize their deductions and a relatively small permanent cut in business taxes.,

It is expected to creat 800,000 new jobs by the end of 1978.

The congressional leadership, headed by House Speaker Thomas (Tip O'Neill of Massachusetts and Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd of West Virginia, enthusiastically supported the proposals after a four-hour meeting with Carter and his top economic advisers here.

O'Neill said he was "tremendously pleased" with the proposals, which he said Carter had agreed to modify somewhat after hearing suggestions from the leadership. Byrd called it "a great package." Both predicted passage of the proposals by Congress but conceded that some changes in them are likely.

After the meeting, Carter outlined the complicated package to reporters but left many of his listeners confused with a series of what appeared to be contradictory figures. It was left to Charles Schultze, Carter's choice to head the Council of Economic Advisers, to explain the details of the package later.

According to Schultze, the Carter economic stimulus package will have four components:

—A program of direct government expenditures to create jobs that would amount to $2 billiion in the current fiscal year which ends Sept. 30, and $5 billion to $8 billion in fiscal year 1978.

—A change in the standard income tax deduction, used by an estimated 69 per cent of American taxpayers, that in effect would increase the size of deductions that could be claimed by low and middle income taxpayers. This would be done by eliminating the current range in the standard deduction — now $1700 to $2400 for single taxpayers and $2100 to $2800 for couples depending on their incomes — and allowing a flat standard deduction of $2400 for all single taxpayers and $2800 for all couples.

—A cut in business taxes that would amount to $1 billion in the 1977 fiscal year and $2 billion in subsequent fiscal years. This is likely to involve

Eight Quakes Rattle Frisco Area

Times News Services

SAN FRANCISCO — A swarm of eight earthquakes rocked a large portion of northern California during the night, but there were no reports of injuries and minimal ones of damage.

A spoksman at the University of California seismographic station at Berkeley said that the first one was recorded at 10:55 p.m. PST Friday night and the last and most severe struck at 1:38 a.m. PST today.

He placed the magnitude of the last temblor at 5.0 and said that one about 40 minutes earlier registered 4.0. Most area residents reported feeing only the two earthquakes.

"The epicenter is about midway between Berkeley and Walnut Creek about 10 miles east of Berkeley," he said, pinpointing an area about 20 miles east of San Francisco. "That would be in between the Hayward Fault and Calaveras Fault," the spokesman continued.

Asked if he thought more quakes might be on the way, he said "I think so, but they will probably be smaller."

Jittery Bay area residents bombarded police with calls and a San Francisco officer reported that one street showed minor cracking and a chandelier fell down in mission district home.

A San Francisco resident said of the 4.0 quake, "it lasted about 15 seconds and my room was really rocking. I thought my wife's picture on my desk would fall over, it was bouncing around so."

In Tehran, meanwhile, Persian-language newspapers reported a severe earthquake hit the village of Dahzir in Iran's southwestern province of Fars today.

The reports could not be immediately confirmed by the earthquake reporting service in Tehran, nor were any additional reports available elsewhere.

The site of the reported quake is just a few miles north of the Persian Guf. The area is heavily faulted and there have been several devastating quakes there in the past.

An earthquake hit Bandar Abbas on the Persian Gulf Wednesday, injuring 10 persons and causing considerable structural damage.

Five persons in the area died when their home collapsed around them the following day, possibly because it was weakened by the quake and rain floods that have afflicted the area and upset communications for the past week or so.

Another quake was reported by radio and television broadcasts on Thursday as having occurred also in the Bandar Abbas vicinity.

And Managua the capital of Nicaragua — scene of a devastating earthquake in 1972 — was jolted Friday night by a five-second tremor, but there were no immediate reports of death or damage.

The tremor hit at 9:26 p.m. (7:26 p.m. PST). Local seismographic institute officials said it was caused by a strong movement on the Pacific coast. Its intensity was not immediately known.

Guaranteed Income Eyed for IWA Pact

VANCOUVER (CP) — A guaranteed annual income plan may be included in contract demands by the International Woodworkers of America this year, Jack Munro, IWA regional president for B.C., said Friday.

Loggers, who make up about one quarter of the IWA's 40,000 membership in British Columbia, experienced an exceptionally good year in 1976 with few closures of the woods due to summer forest fires or snow.

Munro said that in 1975, however, loggers got only six or seven months steady work.

"If the guys work like they did in 1976 the plan wouldn't cost the employers any money," he said. "The plan would be for years like 1975."

It is believed that any plan proposed by the IWA would try to guarantee the workers a full year's income at regular straight time rates. Rates now range between $7.16 an hour for common labor and $9.47 an hour for top trades.

Better Sales In Forestry?

DUNCAN (CP) — There is room for optimism in the 1977 outlook for forest products markets, Don Lanskail, president of the Council of Forest Industries, said Friday.

However, he told the Western Independent Log Haulers' Association here that "unless we can effect some basic changes in our cost structure, any gain we receive will be short-lived."

Lanskail said lumber sales led the market improvement last year and pulp and paper markets appeared good until mid-year when softening demand led to overstocking of world inventory. Plywood faced severe comptetion at home and finished weaker in overseas markets.

The improvements were a result of some of the world's economies beginning to come out of the 1975 recession.

"If this recovery continues in 1977, outlook for timber is good but there is no firm indication of rapid recovery of markets for other products."

Lanskail said lumber improvements in 1976 should be considered against the depressed market in 1975, when production fell 19 per cent from the 1974 level to 7.5 billion board feet. Final 1976 figures were unavailable but a good estimate would be 10.2 billion board feet.

He said the United States economy continued its gradual improvement in 1976 but housing starts, a key factor for the B.C. forest industry, did not reach expected levels. An improvement to 1.7 million starts from 1.5 million starts is forecast for the U.S. in 1977.

Lanskail said the U.S. recovery might also mean less U.S. plywood will be available for export to Canada and Europe this year which should benefit Canadian producers.

"Continuing competition from the U.S. is an astonishing example of how Canadian costs are allowing American plywood producers to jump a 15-per-cent tariff barrier and grab over 22 per cent of the Canadian domestic market," said Lanskail. "What is even more astonishing is that just five years ago the Americans held less than one per cent of the Canadian plywood market."

Lanskail said that with continued promotion of platform frame construction in Japan, it is expected 75 million board feet will be sold there this year.

Expansion of the market in Japan might enable Canadian firms to diminish their economic dependence on the American market, he said.

Lanskail forecast soft pulp and paper markets would continue until at least mid-year.

He said the high costs in the Canadian forest industry have created a price situation "which is allowing our lower-cost competitors to build manufacturing facilities and enter the market."

A TOUCH OF GLASS

MONTREAL (CP) — Pepsi Cola Canada Ltd. was fined $3,000 in sessions court Friday for three counts of selling soft drinks containing dangerous materials, including glass, sand, and in one case, a full book of matches.

The charges, under the Food and Drug Act, were laid after inspectors discovered last January and February that three bottles out of a batch of 2,000 contained foreign particles.

Federal Crown Prosecutor Michel Lecours said the presence of foreign particles in the bottles of Pepsi-Cola and Teem constituted a danger for the public.

Only Million Shots Bad Swine Flu Lab Replies

TORONTO (CP) — A spokesman for Connaught Laboratories Ltd. says a published report quoting a federal official as saying that more than three million doses of swine-flu vaccine have been found to be unusable is grossly inaccurate.

Connaught consultant John Kieran said in an interview Friday that slightly more than one million doses of vaccine packaged by the laboratory have been found to have what he described as a cosmetic problem.

The doses were beginning to show minute particulate matter that did not meet test requirements, "but their potency and safety were not affected."

He added that the problem, discovered within the last two to three weeks, could be solved by filtering the vaccine and repackaging it.

The published report quoted an unnamed federal source as saying that 3.4 million doses of the 10.1 million doses ordered by the federal government "were deemed to be unsatisfactory" by federal health officials who inspect vaccine before it is approved for use.

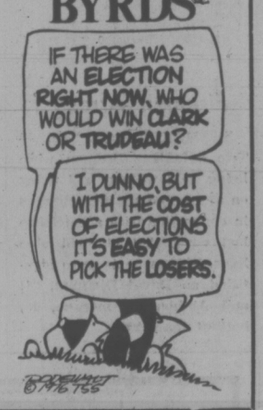
The report said the federal government has committed at least $13.8 million in contracts with Connaught Laboratories and the Armand Frappier Institute in Montreal to process the vaccine.

Meet Some Interesting Canadians . . .

The Times wishes to introduce its readers to some very interesting Canadians, The Byrds, brain-children of Calgary cartoonist Art Rodewalt, who will be appearing daily on the front page beginning Monday.

The Byrds deliver pungent, witty comment on Canadian politics, education, economics and morals, and also wander farther afield from time to time to look at world affairs.

Rodewalt's characters will give you a chuckle a day — even if the chuckle is at your expense as in today's introduction.



YOU'VE A PROBLEM?

Here we are, well into the new year, and you still haven't shed those pounds which appeared with gorging over the Christmas holiday.

Life's hard, isn't it?

But you've got a problem tens of thousands of people halfway round the world would love to have. Old people with sunken faces, kids with stick-like legs, people who are hungry all the time.

They need food, they need education, they need jobs. The Unitarian Service Committee of Canada exists just to help these sorts of people — in places like Nepal, Lesotho, Bangladesh — help themselves.

Most of the money Canadians give to the USC goes to helping children, just like your chidlren except they suffer from malnutrition, a chance at much of a future.

Residents in the Capital district have just about matched the $23,000 they gave last year to the USC campaign. Donations in the current campaign have topped $22,000 and are still trickling in.

With just a little push — a final stirring of belated Christmas spirit — they could push this fund to the hoped-for $30,000.

Just $1 for every pound each of us added would do it easily.

But it will have to be soon because the Victoria Times, which sponsors the local campaign each winter, is about to close the drive for another year.

Donations can be mailed to Victoria Times, PO Box 300, Victoria, or dropped in at the Times office, 2621 Douglas St.

WHOLESALE PRICE OF COFFEE HIKED

The wholesale price of coffee will be shooting up another 40 cents a pound next week, a spokesman for Nabob Foods announced today.

In a press release the company said that after Jan. 14 the wholesale price will be $3.14.

The retail price is expected to be anywhere from $3.44 to $3.74 a pound, the highest ever.

The company notes that since July, 1975, the average cost of green coffee has soared from about 60 cents a pound to $2.24. The prices are New York prices and do not take into account any manufacturing costs, including a 15 per cent shrinkage that occurs at roasting.

The company expects world production will be 11 million bags or 15 per cent short of world demand this year.

'Children Are People Too . . .'

The B.C. Association of Social Workers Friday urged the provincial government to establish a bill of rights for children.

A summary of a brief to be sent to Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm says that current law sees children as chattels.

"It does not recognize them as persons with needs, feelings and opinions," the brief says.

The brief urges seven major reforms to family laws for this legislative session and says the reforms are essential to bring child welfare legislation and family court practice up to what the association feels is a minimum standard.

"Children now have almost no legal rights and our family courts are driving a wedge into troubled families, despite the best efforts of judges and existing court personnel," the chairman of the association's family law committee, Jocelyn Gifford, said.

The brief also urges:

—That the unified family court project no operating in Surrey and Richmond be expanded to the rest of the province;

—That the law provide alternatives to taking children away from their families;

—That the law define "emotional neglect" of children, as well as physical neglect;

—That limits be placed on court adjournments and the amount of time children can be held away from their families;

—That hospitals and schools be required by law to report cases of child abuse.

Icy Roads Play Havoc

Icy road conditions played havoc with motorists overnight with area police reporting 22 accidents.

There were nine mishaps in Saanich, seven in Victoria, two each in Esquimalt and Colwood, and one each in Oak Bay and Sidney.

Police said that although damages ran into several thousand dollars there were no reports of serious injuries.

Victoria police said power was knocked out for a short time in the 200 block Gorge after a car driven by James Peck of 640 Broadmead struck a Hydro pole at 12:59 a.m.

Peck cut his arm and injured his back, and was taken to Victoria General Hospital where he was treated and released.

Land for Trinkets?

VANCOUVER (CP) — The colonial governments of Vancouver Island and British Columbia could have settled Indian land claims for a few trinkets but didn't think they could afford it, according to lawyer Don Rosenbloom.

Rosenbloom, who has represented the Nishga Tribal Council in its land claims, told a public meeting the total claim could probably have been settled for less than today's cost of taking tribe members to dinner at a downtown hotel.

He said the Nishgas have not wavered in the 107-year history of their claim for 5,750 square miles in the Nass River watershed north of Prince Rupert.

"This has been their land since time immemorial and many tribal wars were fought over the boundaries long before the British colonized B.C. Indians have a respect for tribal boundaries even if they are not registered in the provincial land registry."

The federal and provincial governments now are negotiating the land claims but "during the 1840s and 1850s the British colonial office time and again insisted that the colonial government get out and settle these claims," Rosenbloom said.

He said Governor James Douglas "did sign a few small treaties but left virtually all B.C. untreatied."

"After B.C. entered confederation, this became a federal matter and Ottawa had no interest in it as all treaties had been made by the British government"

TILDEN DROPS SUIT FOR SPACE

OTTAWA (CP) — Tilden Rent-a-Car has dropped its $10 million damage suit against the government in exchange for a compromise agreement on booth space for the Canadian-owned company at major airports across the country.

While Tilden and Host Rent-a-Car, another Canadian firm, announced acceptance Friday of government terms for renting counter space at the nine major Canadian airports, other car rental companies were refusing comment.

The car rental companies had been called in by transport department officials to look at contract terms and announce within 30 days whether they would sign agreements.

Avis, Hertz, Budget, Tilden and Host bids had been accepted by the transport department but Tilden disputed the department's selection method. Holiday, another Canadian company, also has announced plans for legal action against the government. It has been excluded entirely from the major airports in the recent round of contract bidding.

The Tilden brothers, sole owners of Tilden Rent-a-Car, said they were disappointed that their company did not get third choice of counter space as they felt it was entitled to under the bids received by the transport department.

But they said they decided to accept fourth position because it was an improvement over the original department offer of fifth position. And legal proceedings would have been long and expensive and perhaps fruitless.

Edward Posen of Winnipeg, Host President, said he found the Tilden law suit "hard to believe except as a publicity stunt."

While Posen said he was satisfied with the counter space his company has received, he indicated he might object if he felt his company would be undercut by booth arrangements reached with other firms. He had not yet seen what the settlement were with other companies.

Fraud Of $10M Charged

VANCOUVER (CP) — Robert Lynn Dolan, a Calgary investment counsellor and manager of mutual funds, was charged Friday with 24 counts involving charges of theft, fraud and conspiracy in the improper use of about $10 million in mutual funds.

The charges — 18 of theft, five of fraud and one of conspiracy — resulted from transactions involving seven mutual funds and are the same charges laid last month against former Bank of B.C. president Frank D. Trebell of Vancouver.

Trebell was charged Dec. 22 with 30 counts and is to appear in provincial court on Jan. 11.

Dolan is believed to be living in Costa Rica and, besides the charges laid against him here, he faces about 20 similar charges in Alberta.

Canada does not have an extradition treaty with Costa Rica.

The charges against Dolan arise from the same transactions that brought the charges against Trebell. Dolan will not face as many charges in British Columbia because he has also been charged in Alberta.

The transactions occurred in B.C. and Alberta between March, 1973, and June, 1975, and five of the funds involved were in the custody of Yorkshire Trust Co.

The charges follow about 15 months of investigation by the superintendent of broker's office and the RCMP.

Dolan is originally from Saskatchewan and his first work in the investment community was with the Regina-based company Houston, Willoughby and Co. Ltd.

After leaving the firm in 1963, he taught for two years at the Saskatchewan Technical Institute, where he developed a special course on investments.

Between 1966 and 1968 he worked for Home Oil in Calgary.

In 1968 he set up his own investment counselling firm — Dolan Investments Ltd. — which later became Dias Ltd. Dias is named in five of the charges against both Trebell and Dolan.

Dolan left Alberta in the summer of 1975, lived for a time on the Hawaiian island of Maui, and is believed to have moved to Costa Rica about nine months ago.

Dolan, alonb with Trebell, is alleged to have taken money from the various mutual funds and invested and reinvested it for private gain, with profits trimmed off and the money returned to the funds.

Dolan and Trebell once were the managers for several of the mutual funds involved in the charges, but management of the funds has been reorganized and the two are no longer involved.

At the time the charges were laid against Trebell, senior executives administering the funds assured the investing public that the funds were secure and there was no need for concern over the charges.

Missing Tanker Crew May Still Be Alive

BOSTON (AP) — The U.S. Coast Guard says there is still a good chance that some of the Grand Zenith's crew members are alive, although a five-day search for the missing oil tanker has turned up only two life jackets, a trunk and a mattress.

The Panamanian ship is presumed sunk, but a coast guard spokesman said there is "a great possibility" that the 38 Taiwanese crewmen have survived and are possibly in the life rafts.",

The coast guard says a person not wearing protective clothing would almost certainly die after 2½ hours in the seven-degree Celsius ocean water.

But if the crew members were in life rafts with canopy covering and if they managed correct rationing, they might survive, said PO William Van Valkenburg.

The life jackets, marked with the ship's name, were found about 330 miles east-southeast of Cape Cod and 240 miles south of Halifax. Later in the day, the trunk and a mattress were seen floating about 14 miles away.

The Grand Zenith was last heard from Dec. 30 when its position was given as 60 miles south of Yarmouth, N.S.

Meanwhile, on the west coast, the coast guard has recommended studying the possibility of pilots boarding ships at the western end of the Strait of Juan de Fuca rather than waiting until ships get as far as Port Angeles.

The recommendation was made during a meeting with the state pilotage commission Thursday.

The coast guard asked the commission to study extension of pilotage and said it might complement radar surveillance and mandatory traffic lanes now planned for the Strait. Ships currently proceed as far as Port Angeles without state pilots.

Rear Admiral Chester Richmond, commander of the 13th Coast Guard District, told the commission it should give attention to assigning more experienced pilots to larger ships.

Captain Phil Luther of the commission said he didn't know that the captain of the port has the right to give navigation orders to a ship.

"Our authority is complete and all-inclusive under . . . the Ports and Waterway Act of 1973. We don't intend to tell you to turn left or right 30 degrees, though we do have that authority. We will continue to tell you when to leave the dock or remain there, when to reduce speed in fog, if necessary, and give other orders," Admiral Richmond said.

allowing businesses to claim about 5 per cent of what they pay in social security payroll taxes as a credit against their income taxes. This proposed change, like the change in the standard deduction, would be permanent and would remain in effect beyond fiscal year 1978.

—A one-time-only rebate on individual 1976 income taxes of between $7 billion and $11 billion, with the benefits aimed primarily at low and middle income taxpayers. As part of the rebate program, Social Security recipients who do not pay income taxes will receive payments in lieu of a tax rebate.

Firefighters To Meet Monday

Victoria firefighters will meet again Monday with Labor Minister Allan Williams and until then the dispute remains at a standstill.

Union president Ross Cameron said after a Friday meeting with Williams that he doesn't know what the minister has in mind for Monday, but as a "common courtesy" no action will be taken over the weekend.

The 13-month long dispute between the firefighters and the city of Victoria moved a step closer to strike action when the union Thursday asked mediator Clark Gilmour to withdraw from the talks.

Cameron said Williams appeared interested in the firefighters' problems and "I feel better just to get these things off my chest."

He said it was the first time he had met Williams and said he was impressed.

DANCE SHOW SCHEDULED

Second in a series of four performances at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, will be given Sunday at 3 p.m. by the Dance Arts Co-Op of Victoria.

The group is a semi-professional company of dancers who are enthusiastic about their work and seek to bring a greater awareness of the dance to this community. Gallery doors open at 2 p.m. and the performance is free.

Firemen Arrested

SHAMOKIN, Pa. (UPI) — Two volunteer firemen were being held without bail today on arson and murder charges in connection with a hotel fire last week that claimed nine lives. The suspects were identified as David Dietman, 21, and Anthony Primerano, 19, both of Shamokin.

the weather

The ridge of high pressure over the B.C. Interior shows no sign of movement. Thus the present weather pattern will persist in most areas through Sunday. However, a weakening Pacific disturbance will bring cloud and snowflurries to some suothern and central areas on Sunday. Little change in the present temperature pattern is expected.

In the Dark Hours, a Lonely Vigil for Survival

Darkness shrouds the sombre truth each night for most of us.

While we sleep the sleep of innocence, there are men taking up their positions on the sidewalk for a lonely vigil in the cause of survival.

They wait, these men, outside the locked doors of Canada Manpower on Fort Street, clinging to the faint hope that when the doors open at 7 a.m. there will be a job for them for that day at least. Usually, there is no job. The wait has been in vain. But they'll be back again, the hardy ones at any rate, for the same wait the next night. And so it goes on.

It was a degree or two below freezing point when I joined the lineup at 6:30 on Thursday morning.

I was fifth there and Jean, the one they call "The Crazy Frenchman," was at the head of the queue. He'd been there since 5 a.m. but said he was "late." Normally he's there at 4 a.m., for being first or among the first few anyway is all important. If you're at the head of the list there's a chance you'll be hired when the contractors start calling for extra labor for the day or maybe for half a day.

That's if they call. And often they don't.

"I've been out here as early as 1:45 a.m. — and there have been four already in front of me!" a guy named Steve told me. "They had sleeping bags and blankets and were all curled up on the sidewalk. You can't beat that."

Even if you do beat it timewise, there's no guarantee you'll get work. Many queue much of the night and then wait most of the day and go home with nothing.

As the regulars tell it, chances are roughly 50-50 in the good months and in the bad months like December the odds are 25 per cent for you and 75 against. They figure that in a week, anything up to 60 hours of waiting can bring them around 15 hours of work. Steve, for example, has been there every day bright and early but has worked only four days in the last month.

Nineteen-year-old Michael McGraw wishes he could be as lucky as that! He lives at Shawnigan Lake, has no car and because he has to rely on a ride into town, can't make it into the Manpower office until 8 a.m. By then, he's way down on the list. He has been turning up religiously each week day for three months now and so far hasn't had a single day's work.

Michael, like quite a few of the others, is critical of Manpower.

"The service is lousy, they just tell you to look at the boards," he said. "They should be offering us some training, instead."

Others complain of inhospitality. The washrooms are kept locked early in the morning when the men are let in and the wait starts all over again. And many say a cup of coffee would welcome. But there is nothing.

What a hell of a system for a country like Canada and in this day and age, you say. And I agree. And we wonder why they bother, these men.

Well, they want to work, they say, and while there is a queue there is hope.

So each morning, long before we are up, they are there with brown paper lunch bags and long faces. For it is not a jolly existence. Most are quite depressed, many cynical.

As Steve said, sure it gets depressing sitting around for six or seven hours or more and then nothing.

But Jean, the Crazy Frenchman, isn't depressed. He's the Charlie Chaplin of Victoria's unemployed.

With his pathos, his charm, his humor injected into a sombre mood, he has kept the spirits of the men who wait in vain alive for six months now.

"You can come in, too," Jean told me with a twinkle in his eye as the doors opened. "It's a federal public place and since you're No. 5 you can sign your name and wait here and if you're lucky, you may be called at 3 p.m. And I can tell you, after two days you will have had enough. But not me. I'm stubborn. When your stomach is empty, you have to be stubborn for the next loaf of bread."

Jean is 45 and single. He has been in construction work all his life, came to B.C. from Montreal in 1970 and says he's lucky he doesn't look at life in a negative way.

"Most people would be depressed but not me — I'm a philosopher," he explained. "I still compare myself lucky to the people of Bangladesh. But still, you've got only one person in 1,000 who would think like me. Most people compare themselves to others they see around them and they become depressed when they see what others have.

"We have to wait in the cold, often in vain, sure. But don't we all have to wait, even when we work? That's life. We wait for the great Expectation but it is imagination. All we really want is a little bit of human communication. That's all. But nobody seems to have time.

"But I do. I have time. And I can give time to care. I can't give these men jobs but I can give them words of hope. And even if they call me the Crazy Frenchman, they like me."

Contractors, who rarely pay over the $3 an hour minimum wage, insist men find their own way to jobs, bring their own lunches or go hungry and then often keep them waiting ages for their pay, drew fire from the waiting lineup.

"If you're married, the contractor figures he has to give you more; if you're single he figures you're good for nothing," laughed Jean.

"They have excuses for all season. In December work is slack because it's the holiday season; in winter it's cold; in spring it's too rainy; in summer we don't need you thanks, we've got all the students we want; and in fall it's windy and getting slack again.

"So it turns in a full circle and meanwhile there's inflation and deflation and you wonder if there's a fifth season where maybe you'll get a chance.

"But you know," Jean said with a parting smile, "if you can take the whole thing philosophically, you're okay. But if you take it seriously . . . you hang yourself after three weeks."

Crime Dip Credited To Increase in TM

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

The rate of crime in British Columbia dipped in 1976 and the Victoria president of the Student's International Meditation Society says the main reason is — TM.

In fact Dan Scoones, 24, a student at the University of Victoria, said Friday that earlier scientific research indicates the crime decline was inevitable because the number of TM adherents in B.C. climbed to one per cent of the population last year.

TM stands for transcendental meditation, a technique which its adherents say can make a person more energetic, perceptive, creative, productive, more content with life. It involves meditation for about 20 minutes twice a day, a sort of recharging of mental batteries.

Scoones was commenting on a story from Vancouver earlier this week in which John Hogarth, B.C. police commission chairman, said the general pattern of crime in the province last year showed a downward swing.

Detailed statistics will be released at the end of this month but Hogarth said it appears "people today are more interested in looking for stability and the 1976 crime figures show this."

Stability is one of the things TM brings to people, its supporters claim, and the research paper Scoones offers in support argues that once the number of TM adherents in a community reaches one per cent of its population, they exert sufficient influence to turn the crime rate down.

The crime rate in Victoria, where an estimated 7,000 people have been instructed in TM technique in recent years, dipped slightly last year, he said.

But Vancouver reached its one per cent of TM practitioners in January a year ago, a total of 10,000 which has now grown to 13,000, he said. Now the province as a whole has passed the one per cent mark.

The research study was completed last July by Dr. Candace Borland and Garland Landrith, MA, psychologists on the faculties of Maharishi universities in Switzerland and Iowa.

Maharishi Mahesh Yogi is the Indian sage and scholar who is founder of the "science of creative intelligence" which uses TM.

The researchers compared 11 American cities where TM adherents had reached one per cent of the population with 11 other similar American cities and measured crime rates.

They said later their results are consistent with a prediction made by the Maharishi that when about one per cent of a population practises TM, a "phase transition" in society toward more harmonious functioning will occur.

JAILED MAN COLLECTS UIC

Pay day for Dick Wayne Hollinger, 24, of Saanich, didn't stop when he went to jail — he still got almost $1,200 in unemployment insurance cheques.

"Quite incredible," said Judge William Ostler when he heard details of the case in Victoria provincial court Friday. "No wonder the fund gets into difficulty."

He fined Hollinger $50 on seven of eight counts of filing false claims for UIC benefits and then sent him back to jail on another matter.

Crown counsel Paul Jarman told the court $1,196 was involved in the UIC charges of which $100 has been repaid. Hollinger pleaded not guilty to the eighth count and Jarman requested a week's remand to consider his position.

Defence lawyer Ted Hanman said the cheques were sent to Hollinger's home address and were brought to him in prison for signature.

Hollinger, of 3433 Bethune, also got a five-day jail term after pleading guilty to wilful damage. Court was told he struck a parked car Dec. 23 at 3568 Tillicum and then kicked and damaged a door trying to get at a witness.

UVic Prof Charges Bonner Preparing N-Power Case

By AB KENT
Times Staff

A Univeristy of Victoria economics professor charged Friday that B.C. Hydro chairman Robert Bonner is preparing a case for nuclear power by raising electricity rates.

Dr. Leonard Laudadio, professor of resource economics and chairman of the department, was commenting on electricity rate hikes effective March 1 and Bonner's statement that nuclear energy is imminent in B.C. in about 10 years.

"I think Bonner is emotionally committed to this notion of nuclear energy. With this increase in rates he is preparing a case for nuclear energy," Laudadio said.

"It's a Mickey Mouse form of accounting he's using," the economist added.

Laudadio said it is his opinion that electrical generation from nuclear sources is "totally unnecessary at this stage," besides being very dangerous.

Not only are there still vast untapped hydro-electric oower resources, but unexplored possibilities for the development of coal-thermal power in B.C., the professor said.

In addition, he said, solar energy is being researched and developed at a rapid pace and indications are that it will be no more costly than nuclear energy for domestic purposes.

Laudadio expects there will be so much progress in solar energy research in the next 15 years there will be no need for nuclear power plants.

He acknowledged that Canada so far has done only

LAUDADIO
. . . unnecessary

small amounts of solar energy research, "but we should at least have the decency to wait for the results of U.S. research."

But a UVic colleague, associate professor of physics Dr. George Beer, holds a distinctly different view from Laudadio and believes a small Canadian-made nuclear reactor would provide the ideal package for power development on Vancouver Island.

Beer, who teaches a course in physics of the environment and energy resources, said B.C.'s life style and industrial base demand huge blocks of power.

"We like the very good life, and that goes with consumption of huge amounts of electrical power," said Beer, who believes it is unlikely people will reduce their demands.

Speaking of B.C. as a whole, Beer said it appears hydro sources will be able to supply electricity for a while, particularly in the north. But the high cost of transmission over long distances makes development of these natural sources increasingly less attractive.

He said he would have to review the latest growth and load figures to make more detailed comment on mainland power requirements, but feels alternative power would be required.

Vancouver Island is largely dependent on mainland sources for electricity, he noted: "Personally, I don't like the idea of more transmission lines across Vancouver Island."

And undersea transmission cables have their disadvantages as well, being subject to marine accidents and earthquake damage.

. . . committed

clear power for potential accident risk and waste disposal problems.

The lead-time required for existing nuclear power plants is seven or eight years, said Beer.

Conventional nuclear power plants use breeding reactors, which produce a waste product with long radioactive life, one of their chief disadvantages.

The much more satisfactory process of nuclear fusion — with no hazardous end products — has not been perfected but scientists hope it may be a safe power source by the end of this century.

Beer commented: "We've been waiting for the fusion reactor since about 1955 and there is still no prototype."

Even if there is a sudden breakthrough in its development, perhaps 20 years of lead time would be required before it could be used as a commercial source of electricity.

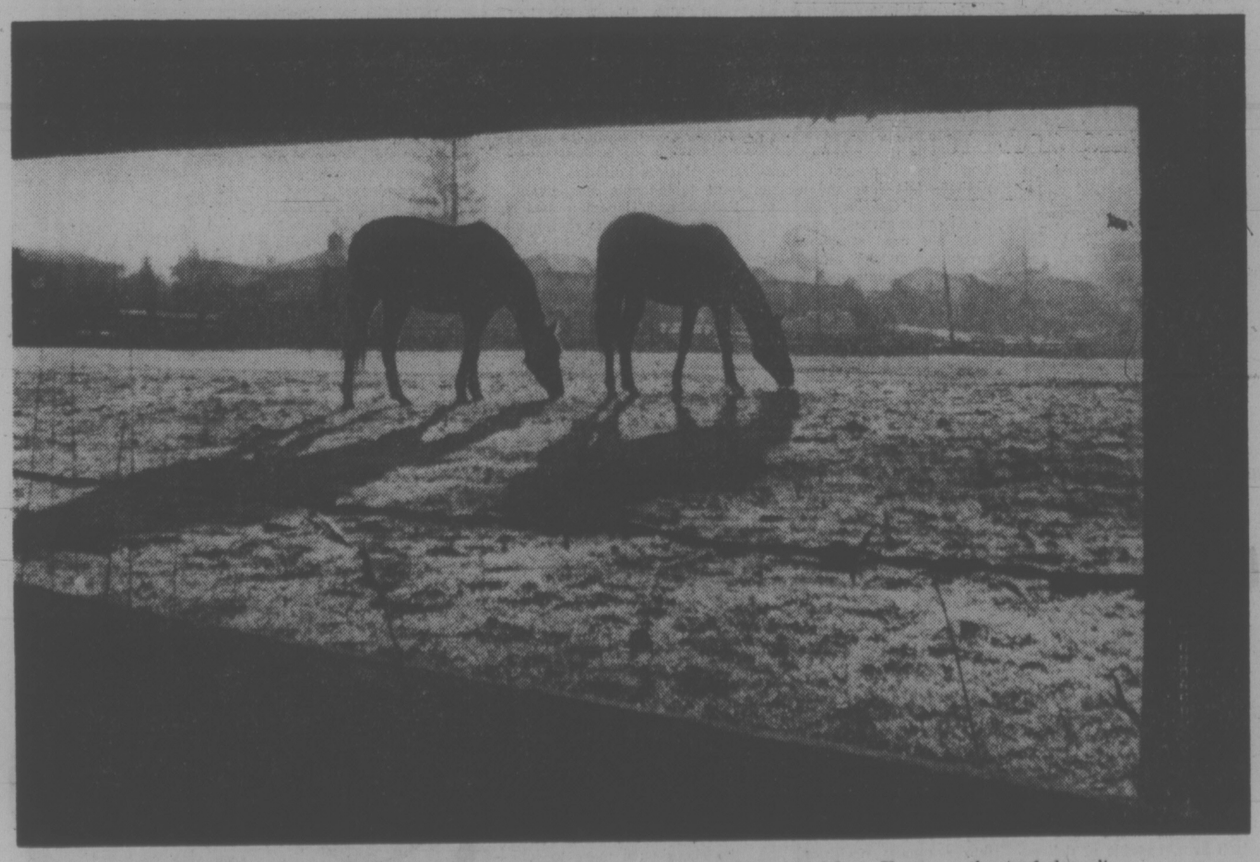
Dr. Robin Riddihough, an earth physicist for the department of energy, mines and resources, said dumping nuclear wastes at sea is not completely safe and drilling deep holes in the ocean floor to bury waste capsules would be expensive and temporary.

Canada has started sonfe research into dry-land disposal of atomic wastes, Riddihough said. The Geological Survey has begun examining granite in the Canadian Shield to determine its suitability for burial of radioactive material.

Granite is very hard, does not fracture easily and occurs in large masses.

Riddihough noted that B.C.'s Coast Range is virtually solid granite.

He also said he is not satisfied that all B.C. electricity needs can't be met by hydro power.



SEEING DOUBLE, Times photographer John McKay used pasture fence along Keating Crossroad at Central Saanich to frame this tranquil view of sedate horses taking breakfast. Frost on the turf doesn't deter them so maybe frozen grass is the same as ice cream to the equine set.

Brief Relief Seen In Crosswalk Feud

Temporary relief may be in sight for the mothers who have voluntarily been helping school children cross the Trans-Canada Highway at Harriet Road.

Norman Zapf, construction director for the highways ministry, said when a widening project starts in the area, the ministry will assume responsibilty for ensuring a safe crossing exists.

"During construction, if we have to put out adult crossing guards, we will," he said.

But the long-range solution — a pedestrian tunnel at Seaton Road when the highway widening project is completed — is not what the mothers want.

Seaton is too far away, they say, and the mothers fear child molesters may lurk in the lengthy tunnel which will extend under four lanes of roadway.

In the meantime, mothers like Mrs. Mary Hannah, of 119 Crease, will continue to work as voluntary crossing guards because they feel the crossing is dangerous.

Children living north of the highway must attend Tolmie Elementary School on the south side.

"I won't let my kids go under the tunnel," Mrs. Hannah said, adding even if there is a decent crossing at Seaton, it would be so far away children would never use it.

She said it added at least two-thirds of a mile to the walk to school. "You have to go north to get south."

Parents living in the area want the highways department and school board to take a long, hard look at the problem, she said.

A pedestrian operated signal at Harriet or Wascana would be the best solution, they feel. Children living further up the highway have that advantage at Tillicum when they cross to Hampton Elementary School.

"We can't let this go. They (school board and highways) are going to get a fight from us.

"My husband and I have even talked about moving," Mrs. Hannah said, adding that they would have to go into debt just so their child could go to school in safety.

Apartment Vacancies Increase

The apartment vacancy rate in the Victoria area was 0.6 per cent in October, up from 0.3 per cent in April, Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation said today.

The vacancy rate has risen to 10.4 per cent in newly-completed buildings, up from 3.6 per cent for the same type of accommodation in April.

For older apartments, the vacancy rate was only 0.3 per cent, up from 0.2 per cent.

The trend is expected to continue through 1977 with some forecasts putting the over-all vacancy rate up as high as three per cent across the Victoria urban area by summer.

In October the vacancy rate was 0.8 per cent in James Bay, 2.1 per cent in Esquimalt (up from 0.1 per cent and 0.7 per cent respectively).

Its Not Just the Elite Who Enjoy the State Ball

family

elizabeth forbes

This time last year, when it was certain there would be no State Ball to mark opening of the Legislature, I was amongst those who expressed disappointment at the decision and a hope that the ball would soon be reinstated.

Well, there is to be a State Ball in Government House this January. And again we are hearing the carping voices that said, last year, it was an extravagance we could readily do without.

The grumbling and the peevish shouts insist this type of event is a lot of nonsense. That it's a waste of money. That the economic picture is still far from bright.

Therefore, no one should smile, laugh or dance, even for one night.

The amazing thing is that those doing the grumping and groaning all seem to have one blind eye.

They see what they so glibly label as the unnecessary expense, yet fail to note that the State Ball assists shops and businesses of many kinds, not only in Victoria but in other parts of the province.

Also that it helps to stimulate the economy in the dull days that follow the Yuletide buying spree.

Here let me remind you that well over a thousand invitations are issued for a State Ball.

A relatively small number go to those on what is known as the protocol list. All the others go out (many through our elected Members of the Legislative Assembly) to recipients in villages, towns and cities in every constituency in British Columbia; also to heads of volunteer groups and other organizations and to individuals who have been active in different forms of service to the people of this province.

With the result that with every State Ball, many British Columbia citizens, of all ages, enter Government House for a first time on a festive occasion they will remember and talk about for years.

At this moment Government House secretary, Gar Dixon, expects at least 800 will attend the ball on January 14.

Let's look at that number for a moment. What does it mean to stores and businesses here and throughout the province?

For a starter, many of the feminine guests buy new gowns for the occasion; new footwear, jewelry and even outer wraps to complement those gowns.

They arrange for new hairdos, new perms, or at the very least, a facial and a shampoo and set. So you can be sure beauty salon appointment books are well filled days before the ball.

Dress suits will be rented by many of the male guests who often find it easier to be fitted in this way for an occasional festive eevent, than to own a tuxedo themselves.

On the other hand if guests plan to wear gowns and suits already in their wardrobes, dressmakers and tailors get into the act as hems and pant cuffs are lengthened or shortened and seams are eased out or taken in.

Dry cleaners, too, are called upon to freshen up many formals or dress suits.

Taxi companies benefit, for many guests prefer to arrive at Government House and to leave again by taxi on State Ball night, rather than risk having to park their cars blocks away — perhaps when it's raining.

Now let's look at those who attend the ball from out-of-town.

They come to Victoria by bus, train, ship or plane. So transportation companies get in on the party.

If they do bring their own cars, there is the extra gas and oil they need while here and on the road.

They stay in one or other of our hotels or inns. They eat in our restaurants. And, if they are from far-off places in the province, they manage to get into our stores for shopping, before they leave for home.

In Government House itself, extra help is called in for the occasion; extra food is needed, also extra liquor.

An orchestra must be hired. One that not only plays waltzes and foxtrots to please the older guests but also the drum-beating music that sets younger feet to stomping and shuffling.

And don't for a minute believe what the grumblers and groaners say — that it's provincial government money that pays the full shot for this special night in Government House.

Many of the extras guests will enjoy at the State Ball on January 14, will be provided personally by His Honor, Lieutenant-Governor Walter S. Owen.

I could continue enumerating benefits that accrue from a State Ball.

Benefits that I'm willing to wager would far out-reach the expense of this event, if they could be totalled into one over-all sum.

And although I am no mathematician, even I can see that money going to the various places I have listed travels on in an ever widening circle to benefit "thousands of other British Columbians.

Therefore, let me say again, I'm happy there is to be a State Ball this year, on the night after opening of the current session of the Legislature, and a pox on the carpers, the grumblers and the groaners, with their (seemingly) blind eyes!

SCOOP CURBS HOOKEY

VANCOUVER (CP) — Operation SCOOP — School Children Out Of Place — is helping reduce the number of shoplifting incidents, burglaries and thefts in the east end of Vancouver.

In the first six weeks Constables Joe Dingman and Brian Metzgner picked up between 250 and 300 students and they say there has been a 20-per-cent decrease in daytime thefts since then.

The two police officers cruise the area in unmarked cars looking for children between seven and 15 years old.

"When we do pick them up we usually take them back to school and we're told the parents will be contacted," Constable Dingman said.

He said truants' favorite haunts are restaurants and pool halls.

"Kids are pretty smart and they know when we're around and when we're not around," he said. "But they rarely go to these places by themselves. There's usually three or four of them at least."

He said truancy is most common in Grades 8 and 9, or ages 13 and 14.

"There are two questions an adult should ask a child who comes to his door asking for pop bottles in the middle of the day," he said.

"They are: 'what are you collecting the bottles for?' and 'why aren't you in school?' "

"Usually, he's just casing the joint and, if no one is home, he may try get in."

Offenders Pay Their Debt

SURREY (CP) — Joe Doe gets home from his job and rushes to a rest home to teach the elderly residents how to play snooker.

Jill Doe bikes over to her neighborhood pool to teach toddlers how to swim before heading off to her job.

And both of them report regularly to their community service officer, a person who works directly with the courts and the probaion office, keeping adult offenders out of jail and in the community.

Community service officer Harry Whittell once was a policeman who sent criminals to jail. Then he became a prison officer who kept them there. Now he is paid to keep them out of jail.

The Surrey community service program is based on a similar plan in Britain which puts the offender into the community where he lives, spending up to 200 hours working for the community.

In the last year, Whittell has placed more than 100 offenders in jobs from cleaning up school grounds to teaching swimming and snooker-playing.

What is important is that the offender work off his debt within his community, Whittell said.

"The people there know him. He has to regain their respect."

"We'll assist him, the responsibility lies squarely on his shoulders. He has to show that he is not the type who should go to jail."

Minis Make Comeback —Over Pants, Boots

By BERNADINE MORRIS

NEW YORK — Bonwit Teller picked up the ball recently and ran with it. "The look that turned Paris upside down," it said in an ad that was run upside down. The ad depicted three versions, in striped, plaid or foulard-printed cotton, of what the store called "le mini-sack," priced from $21 to $32 each, and sketched on figures wearing tights, leg warmers and boots.

As the customers stepped off the elevators, that's what they saw: three mannequins dressed in the styles, similarly accoutered.

Cindy Kweller, who plans to go to dental school, was one of the shoppers who stopped by the display.

"It's the sunglasses I'm interested in," she said when asked what she thought about minis. When pressed for her opinion about short skirts, she hedged. "I don't know if I care for them or not, but I love the sunglasses," she said.

Miss Kweller was wearing pants. So were most of the other women who paused to admire or even try on the "mini-sacks."

"I love minis," said Paulette Charles, a clerk, who tried on one of the hooded dresses over her pants. "I haven't had one in a while."

Dorotby Donaldson, a student, said she loved short skirts and managed to keep some, because "I never throw anything away." She also pulled her mini over pants.

"I like skirts either real long or short," said Jill Westcott, who goes to college in California and was home for the holidays. "I picked this dress because it's kind of pretty."

The consensus was that today's tunic might be worn as a minidress tomorrow, but the issue did not seem too troublesome.

"The price is really good and that's what counts," said Miss Charles.

"The styles are seling nicely and we're pleased," said Ninette Ricca, the Bonwit buyer. "It doesn't matter whether they're tunics or dresses — we're not dictating."

In a week's time, the store sold more than 200 dresses, she explained.

"Some of our branch stores — Short Hills and Hanhasset — did well with them," she whent on. 'Some of the customers who were going south said they'd wear them over bathing suits while others told me they'd wear them here with tights, leg warmers, boots and heavy socks."

The most popular style was a tie between the hooded striped cotton dress at $22 and the plaid in cotton flannel at $27, Miss Ricci added.

"I thought the things were all reasonably priced but none of the women I talked to mentioned price," she said. "They seemed more interested in the way the dresses looked and how they would wear them."

$1 Million Goal

VANCOUVER (CP) — Although deaths due to heart attacks have been reduced, heart disease remains Canda's No. 1 killer and the British Columbia Heart Foundation is trying to make it No. 2. Heart foundation spokesman Kelly Young says the foundation's Heart Fund goal in 1977 will be $1,075,000 — the first $1-million goal in its history.

West Coast's Poor Soils Need Lots of Nutriants

GARDENING
jack beastall

By JACK BEASTALL

Most newcomers to this area are dismayed with what we call "soil" in our gardens. Frankly, we do not have much in the way of soil anywhere in B.C. excepting a few fertile valleys.

There are good reasons for the paucity and poor-quality of the soils on the west coast.

This island exists because of the masses of rock formed in previous volcanic eras. Glacial action and weather combined to break down some types of rocks, leaving either tracts of clay or small areas of sand and gravel.

These products of powdered rock became contaminated with organic materials, making it possible for low forms of plants to grow, which added more organic matter. Grasses and sub-shrubs followed and finally the western continental rain forest.

Reduced light beneath the tree canopy and competition for soil nutrients lessened the population of grasses and subshrubs, and also reduced the amount of organic material added to the soil.

This loss was not replaced by the coniferous forest trees which shed only 10% of their foliage annually, mostly in the form of small needles. Therefore, in forested areas only enough organic matter has been added to the clay and sand base over the centuries to give us about four inches of top soil.

Compared with other parts of Canada, this amount is insignificant. The good soils of Ontario resulted from large quantities of foliage shed by the deciduous trees which prevail in that region, and the deep soils of some prairie areas from the lush growth of prairie grass which is composted each winter with nitrogen-rich snow.

No comparable legacy awaited the early settlers of coastal British Columbia. A few fertile valleys and plateaus were discovered and farmed, but in most of the area the basic clay and sand had to be improved before food plants could flourish.

The product we call soil is a mixture of mineral and organic matter. The organic content is reduced to its chemical components by micro-organisms, and the chemicals are used by plants.

Every inch of growth made by a grass, a sub-shrub, or a forest tree represents a certain number of cubic inches of organic matter converted to chemicals and removed from the soil. Unless the vegetation replaces the equivalent of this loss annually, the soil gradually returns to its base of clay or sand and the amount of vegetation in the area become less.

The soil a gardener refers to as a "good soil" has the correct proportions of organic and mineral matter. A "poor" soil has low organic content and high mineral. Add organic matter to a poor soil and it is immediately improved.

Climate also has an efect on soil. Snow is high in nitrogen which is collected from the air and trapped between the flakes as they fall on one another. In areas of heavy snowfall this nitrogen is added to the soil in spring as the snow melts.

The air temperatures in areas subject to snow prevents plant growth. Therefore, very little of the soil's reserve of nutrients is used during the snow period. In spring there are sufficient plant nutrients available to promote rapid and steady growth.

In areas having a mild winter climate conditions are different. Plants are never totally dormant and plant nutrients are being used throughout the winter to maintain foliage and even flowers. This amounts to an almost continuous loss of organic matter.

To be available to plants, soil nutrients must be in a chemical form that is soluble in water because plants can only absorb liquids. A mild winter climate in the northern temperate zone usually indicates heavy winter rainfall and the minimum of snow. The rain collects the soluble chemicals and carries them to ditches, creeks, rivers and eventually to the ocean, resulting in considerable loss. The lack of large amounts of snow causes a soil poor in nitrogen.

Thus the soils in areas of mild winter climate lose much and gain little due to the prevailing weather.

To maintain a soil suitable for growing healthy garden plants, these annual losses must be replaced by the gardener. Replacement is accomplished by adding organic matter to the soil.

Organic matter is the waste products of living things. The discarded parts of garden plants and the manures from domesticated animals are the main sources of organic matter for the home gardener.

At the start of the year we have time to contemplate and to plan our gardens for the coming season. We can decide just what we would like to have and how it will be obtained.

Knowing the reasons for the poor soils that abound in this area gives us clues to many of our gardening problems, and knowing the one soil ingredient which will eliminate many of those problems makes it possible for us to have the productive garden of our dreams.

Plants cannot be better than the soil in which they grow. A poor soil produces poor plants, and since nature abhors anything but the best it is a law that they be destroyed.

Destruction is carried out by adverse weather which the weak plants cannot withstand, and by pests and diseases to which such plants are prone, and these are the three main problems the gardener strives to avoid.

Fertilizers and sprays are not the answer. They are stop-gap measures that fail to correct the cause of the problems. The cause is soil low in organic matter, a condition that can be remedied without resorting to the use of anything that may further damage the environment.

To grow the healthy plants we have envisioned our main concern must be the soil. When time and energy is spent on improving the soil the plants take care of themselves and the gardener has more time to enjoy the fruits of his labor.

We can scrap all those New Year gardening resolutions which we know from experience will never be put into operation, and substitute the one that will result in the garden we have always wanted and be a goal within our reach.

We can resolve to replace the organic matter which has been converted into nutrients used by our plants and leached by our weather with quantities sufficient to turn the clay or sand into a highly productive garden.

And as a reminder of that resolution we can put a big sign on the toolshed door reading "No soil, No garden."

Work For Week

Check soil around foundation planting for dryness even after light rains. Wide eaves and dry walls combine to keep this area arid.

Check plants and cuttings wintering in coldframe. They need both air and dampness at roots.

Balcony, sundeck and patio plants in containers will need protection against hard frost, but material must be dry. Protect root area with burlap, old matting or extra box (wood) as insulation.

Pruning of outdoor grapes can be done now while canes are dormant.

Bring screened compost under cover (shed or greenhouse) for early sowing. Sterilize some with moist heat for special needs.

Remaining Jerusalem artichokes in ground should be lifted and stored a short time for use; keep a few of the best tubers for planting next month.

VOLUNTEERS WANTED

VANCOUVER (CP) — The University of British Columbia is seeking 24 volunteers to test a new male contraceptive.

Dr. Robin Percival-Smith of the department of obstetrics and gynecology and Morton Warner, an assistant professor in the department of health care and epidemiology, have received a grant from the World Health Organization for the project.

Volunteers will receive six injections of a two-hormone contraceptive, then sperm samples will be tested.

Students Say Bourassa Got What He Deserved

MONTREAL (CP) — "We can sit here and talk until 1980," said the 16-year-old bilingual student. "We have a different ancestry, a different heritage, our environment is different and we have been educated differently."

She was summing up a debate between groups of six French and six English students from Montreal high schools who met to discuss the Nov. 15 election which brought the Parti Quebecois to power.

The students, aged between 13 and 16 and each from a different school, were invited to discuss such issues as Quebec independence, language rights and economics. They were also asked to fill out questionnaires on party preference.

All six students from French schools voted PQ on the questionnaires, while the English pupils split between the Liberals and the conservative Union Nationale.

Most agreed, however, that the deposed Liberal administration of Robert Bourassa got what it deserved when its huge majority in the 110-seat national assembly was reduced to a minority of 27 seats.

"At the beginning we were afraid, but finally we told ourselves it's time for a change, said Sylvie Ouellet. "To be taken in by the Liberals or to be taken in by the PQ is the same thing, but we decided to take a chance with the Quebecers."

Two French students argued strongly for Quebec separation. Raymond Lachapelle said the province has the natural resources and manpower to make it alone.

"The only thing we don't have a great deal of is oil. . . . With this in mind, one mustn't be too afraid of what would happen if Quebec separates."

But Michael Hamelin, born of French-Canadian parents and attending an English school, argued: "We're in the 20th century now. We're a growing country and I don't think Quebec has any logical reason for separating."

Ronny Perrotta, 13, said Quebec would be in trouble if it couldn't appeal to the federal government for help.

The language question, especially the Official Language Act which funnels children from non-English families into French schools, was hotly debated. It was significant that the debate was conducted mostly in French.

While opinions were widely divergent on almost every point, everyone hoped there would not be a mass exodus of English-Canadians.

"It would be unfortunate because the English are not stupid, they have a value just like the French, and their leaving would be a loss, just as if I left," said Jacques Levesque, who is no relation of the new premier.

None of the students saw the promised referendum on Quebec independence as an instant panacea for the province.

One student said Quebecers of both languages would still be debating separatism "when we're all senior citizens."

Patients at Ease With a Computer

LONDON (CP) — Some patients would rather give delicate medical information to a computer than to their doctor, psychologists concluded after a five-year experiment.

The study, reported in the British Medical Journal, found that alcoholics requiring medical treatment gave a more reliable description of their drinking habits to a computer than to a human interrogator.

The experimenters, working in a Glasgow hospital, said patients who had never seen a computer were completely at their ease when questions were put to them on a typewriter or television screen, apparently because the computer was impersonal and had no tone of voice to appear—or seem to appear—censorious or disgusted.

Another advantage, the researchers said, is that the computer is tireless and can ask the same questions all day without appearing bored, tired or depressed. Deaf people preferred it because it communicated with them visually, avoiding embarrassment.

Dr. Robert Lucas, a research psychologist, foresaw further developments.

The computer could be programmed to adjust to the response time of the patient, slowing or accelerating its questioning. When patients take longer to answer diagnostic questions because they are uncertain, the computer could be programmed to measure the delay and evaluate the answer accordingly.

Some parts of a physical examination, such as pulse and temperature taking, could also be handed over to computers, which would pass on routine information to the consultant as a basis for his examination and recommendations for treatment.

Patients responded to the computers questions by pushing "Yes," "No," "Don't Know" or "Repeat" buttons.

Tests on 40 alcoholic patients revealed that the drinkers, on average, confessed to consuming more than 1½ times as much alcohol to the computer as the quantities they admitted to a human interrogator.

The researchers said this suggests a potential for getting accurate information in other situations in which a patient might feel embarrassment or shame in talking directly to another person.

Details of sexually transmitted diseases, socially unacceptable abnormalities, habitual wife or child assault and other conditions probably would be obtained more accurately by the computer.

Alcoholism Battled

LYNN LAKE, Man. (CP) — Management and labor are cooperating to combat alcoholism in this northern Manitoba mining community of 3,000.

For four years the United Steelworkers of America local here has been maintaining a drug and alcohol committee to provide counselling and, where necessary, trips to detoxification centres in Thompson, The Pas or Winnipeg, 700 miles to the southeast.

Sherritt Gordon Mines Ltd. on its part, has been treating abuse of alcohol as an affliction rather than automatic grounds for dismissal.

The company will refer a person to the committee if it sees work is suffering because of a problem with alcohol.

The employee is not forced to accept the help offered but there is a strong incentive: if he refuses, he may lose his job.

"Most people know they have a problem but they don't admit it, because there's a stigma attached," said Neil Schafer, the only one of the four original members still on the committee. "We never tell a person he's an alcoholic, but we confront him with facts and try to get him to see that he has a problem."

If a person is sent out of town to a detoxification centre, he is put on sick leave and his records never indicate what his illness was.

He receives $133 a week.

"It's much less than most guys make in a week," said Mr. Schafer, "but it's better than getting fired."

Since the program's inception, about 100 persons have received the committee's services. Mr. Schafer said they have had varying degrees of success.

"Nobody can go through the program without it having some impact. But it may not take hold right away. With some, all it does is plant the seed."

Recently, the committee has been paying more attention to prevention.

MUST HAVE DATA

"It's a slow and painful process. It's a matter of educating not only top management but the front-line supervisors. A lot of supervisors are personal friends of the guys and they will cover for them.

"What we are asking the supervisors to do is keep track of a guy who misses a shift on a regular basis and let us know about it.

"Lynn Lake is a small town. If a guy misses a shift, we know where he was, even if he brings a doctor's certificate saying he was sick. But the company needs data before it can act."

Following up is another important aspect of the committee's work, Mr. Schafer said.

"Most people who undergo treatment find it difficult to return to Lynn Lake because the same old problems exist. Whatever caused them to drink—a bad marriage, dislike for the job, dislike of Lynn Lake—must still be faced. And there are no professional people . . . no psychiatrists or social workers to help them."

Social pressure can be influential. The fact that people know they are being watched can slow people down.

The committee's resources are limited, but, Mr. Schafer said, it's a lot better than nothing.

"There really was no one here four years ago to take care of these people. It was much easier to laugh it off."

City Magazines Flourish

TORONTO (CP) — Advice ranging from plant care to home furnishings for urban dwellers characterize city magazine publications, which are becoming increasingly successful.

"Our whole secret is that we print phone numbers," said Alexander Ross, editor of Toronto Life.

"We give out information that people can use in their daily lives. If newspapers ever did that, we'd be out of business."

Mr. Ross said the magazine, which almost folded in 1973, has been taken over by publisher Michael De Pencier who put the emphasis on "young urban trendies" and the circulation increased to 55,000 from the 1973 low of 30,000.

"Where to get stuff cheap" and "Where to get stuff fixed" were two of the best-selling cover stories for the magazine last year, Mr. Ross said, adding he plans to use at least one of them again next year.

On the other hand, an article about gay capitalism and another on Jewish developers were so controversial that many people cancelled their subscriptions.

A recent poll of Toronto Life readers indicated that 68 per cent of the readers had incomes of $15,000 or more.

Toronto Calendar, part of a chain which also publishes magazines in Montreal, Vancouver and Washington, D.C., appeals to even more affluent readers.

The magazine is delivered free to 170,000 Toronto homes, whose owners are in the top 25-per-cent income bracket.

The method benefits advertisers because it gives them only readers who are able to afford their goods and services.

About 80 per cent of a Calender magazine is listings of where to go, what to do, and whom to see, said Richmond Balentine, Calendar president.
